Anti-job tax movement picks up steam in area

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter
KUNKLETOWN — Rollin Ronemus is unemployed. About four weeks ago he received his Pleasant Valley

School District occupational tax notice. It says he must pay $10 for being unemployed and Ronemus does not like it one bit. "I don't know how they can do this," said Ronemus, 31, a former plant superintendent for a Stroudsburg firm. "I think it is unfair," said Ronemus, who added he does not intend to pay the tax.

Ronemus, his wife, Elaine May, and their three children have lived in the Kunkletown R.D. 1 area for over three years. He says this is the first time he was assessed for his occupation. The same for his wife, a housewife. She does not intend paying the $6 housewife assessment either.

"We've discussed it before," said Mrs. Ronemus, "But this is the first we have been assessed. I won't pay it. It is unfair."

"How can they assess my husband, who has been unemployed since October, when the federal government can't tax his unemployment benefits? I just don't understand."

Ronemus and his wife said they are helping Mrs. Mary Nagele of Dotters Corners with her fight to have the occupational tax on housewives dropped by the Pleasant Valley School District.

Mrs. Nagele said this week between 100 to 150 people have signed petitions urging the abolition of the tax with many more people expected to sign before the drive ends.

"We think it is unfair, not only to housewives, but to unemployed persons and retirees," Mrs. Nagele said.

Agreeing with her was Mrs. Charlotte Aiken of Stroud Township, who said she was not going to pay the tax anymore.

"I have thought about how bad it was for a long time," Mrs. Aiken said, "but there wasn't much one person could do. Maybe they'll listen to a group of people."

Mrs. Aiken said she had paid the tax in the past. She said it is especially bad that retired persons have to pay the tax, because "they have a limited income to live on and hardly get enough to make ends meet as it is."

Mrs. Nagele said after the petitions are filled she will present them to the Monroe County Commissioners and ask them to see what can be done to change the law.

Housewives in Allegheny County went to court to get the tax abolished and won, Mrs. Nagele said. They were awarded a rebate on taxes they had paid in the past.

Communist troops parade through 'Ho Chi Minh City'

SAIGON (UPI) — The Communist army rode victoriously into Saigon in Soviet-made tanks and captured U.S. jeeps Wednesday, ran up the Viet Cong flag atop the presidential palace and announced the capital had been renamed Ho Chi Minh City — "the city which Uncle Ho dreamed of."

(Related stories, pages 2, 13)

Shooting erupted at the palace, now Viet Cong headquarters. Last ditch government defenders fought several suicide battles around the city. A Saigon police colonel lifted a pistol to his head and committed suicide in the main downtown square.

But the war—35 long years of it, against American, French, Japanese and South Vietnamese forces—was over.

The Viet Cong in Paris said it would follow a neutralist policy and hinted privately the two Vietnams may soon be reunited. It was divided into North and South Vietnam after the victory of Ho Chi Minh, the late president of North Vietnam, over the French at Dien Bien Phu in 1954.

Most Americans were gone and their once formidable embassy, ransacked and burned by resentful South Vietnamese, in ruins. With them went about 60,000 Vietnamese, many of whom feared for their lives under a Communist regime. Duong Van Minh, the two-day president who surrendered, was reported in custody.

Hanoi radio, in a broadcast monitored in Bangkok, proclaimed Saigon was "totally liberated" at 11:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday). Saigon radio returned to the air under new management and announced Saigon, "the city which Uncle Ho dreamed of," henceforth would be called Ho Chi Minh City.

About 3½ hours after the last Americans who wanted to leave were flown out by Marine helicopters, Communist tanks rumbled into Saigon, smashed through walls at the presidential palace and crunched down Tu Do Street—its name means "Freedom Street"—chewing up the asphalt.

"Hello, comrades," the smiling, laughing Communist soldiers shouted to bystanders.

The only Americans left in Saigon were a handful of newsmen and missionaries.

The first day under Communist control was comparatively calm, but there seemed to be little joy among the populace. Government soldiers discarded their boots and uniforms and tried to fade into the civilian crowds which, slowly at first, made their way into the streets to watch their erstwhile enemies realize the dream they had had all those years.

They watched the Communist victory parade down Tu Do. Some waved, perhaps a bit apprehensively, to the smiling Viet Cong troops.

A huge Viet Cong flag—red on top, blue on the bottom with a gold star in the center—flew over the presidential palace, the command post for a succession of South Vietnamese presidents who tried and failed to halt the Communists.

Reaction in Washington was somber. It was post-Vietnam, and President Ford was meeting with members of the Egyptian parliament. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said simply U.S. policy in Vietnam "did not achieve the objectives of those who started the original involvement."

That involvement cost the United States more than 50,000 lives and $150 billion over 14 years. It all fell apart in the lightning offensive that began in the Central Highland jungles in mid-March and ended with President Minh's 60-second surrender announcement at 10:20 a.m. Wednesday (10:20 p.m. EDT Tuesday).

End of Viet war greeted with relief in Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The evacuation of Americans from Vietnam and the surrender of Saigon brought sadness and resignation to official Washington Wednesday—but, above all, relief.

Congressional leaders pledged, and largely observed, a policy of looking to the future without recrimination as President Ford urged.

"Let's start afresh," said Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, long-time opponent of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

"Let's do what we can in recognizing our mistakes and reassessing our policies," he told reporters. "I think it's time we get away from this World War II syndrome and recognize the world for what it is and act accordingly."

Later, in a Senate speech, Mansfield deplored the delay in evacuating Americans and said in the end he thought it might not have been accomplished at all had not Congress insisted on withdrawal of American personnel and made a speed-up of that process a condition of its appropriations for financial aid.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said the end of the war "does not abrogate our responsibility to help rebuild a land and a people so utterly torn asunder."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., also said U.S. aid should be provided to the war's victims in Indochina "in a diplomacy of reconciliation and normalization."

To Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who campaigned vainly for the U.S. presidency in 1972 largely on his opposition to the war, expressed hope the country may have learned a lesson from it.

"The only way to redeem anything from the whole nightmare is not to repeat it. That's the only consolation I can draw from it," McGovern said.

But Rep. F. Edward Hebert,

D-La., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee until deposed earlier this year, was dubious about lessons: "The tragedy is that we never learn from history," he said. "We never learn."

And Sen. Barry Goldwater, whose proposal for using atomic weapons to defoliate the forests of South Vietnam in 1964 haunted his losing presidential campaign against Lyndon B. Johnson, said Wednesday: "We should have won that war..."

President delays taxing oil imports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford agreed Wednesday to give Congress another month to work out its own energy conservation program, and announced a delay until the end of May resumption of increased tariffs on imported oil.

But Ford also set in motion a plan to lift present controls on domestic oil prices over the next two years, an action that could add five cents to the average price of a gallon of gasoline by mid-1977.

Ford's decisions, announced by Federal Energy administrator Frank Zarb, followed a meeting with congressional Republican leaders. The lawmakers expressed pleasure with the President's action.

It was the second Ford postponement of a new $1 per barrel tariff—raising the levy to $2 of an ultimate $3 he initially planned—in the hope of getting Congress to pass a comprehensive national energy conservation program.

"We are hopeful still that Congress in a very short time, possibly before they go into recess, will produce a bill and that the bill will be satisfactory," Zarb said.

But he said this was the last such postponement Ford will grant unless he sees at the end of May "the prospect of fairly imminent legislation that is going to give us a comprehensive program."

Congress is scheduled to begin a Memorial Day recess May 21. By then, Zarb said, the FEA could have conducted public hearings, gathered all necessary comment, and sent to Capitol Hill its plan for decontrolling the price of domestic crude oil.

"Congress will have the last say so (on decontrols)," Zarb said. "They have five days to override the President's action in this area."

Occupation tax can be appealed

STROUDSBURG — Taxpayers displeased with their property tax assessment can seek recourse from the county's board of assessment appeal.

The same course of action is open for persons disgruntled with occupational tax assessments they received from Stroudsburg and Pleasant Valley School Districts.

Monroe County Chief Assessor William H. Fetherman said Wednesday very few persons exercise the option to appeal occupational assessments and those who do are usually persons who have just retired and want to avoid paying an assessment on their former occupation.

September 1 is the deadline for filing the appeal form, available in Fetherman's office across the street from the Monroe County Courthouse.

Appeals are heard during September by the appeals board—in Monroe County, the county commissioners.

Fetherman said there is no recourse available for persons wanting to appeal their per capita tax. It is assessed to all persons, regardless of occupation, after they reach age 18.

A special assessment is available for eligible persons over 62 years of age, Fetherman said.

Called the "Special O Assessment," it is available from township assessors. There are several qualifications retired persons must meet, including a $145 monthly limit of income; they must be unemployed; own no more property than the house they live in, and have savings accounts and other assets totalling less than $3,500.

Fetherman said the special assessment does not prevent the elderly taxpayer from being assessed, it just lowers the assessment to zero.

Zero deficit impossible

Balanced budget—no way

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate defeated a proposal Wednesday to aim for a balanced budget in fiscal 1976 instead of for the largest deficit in history.

Defeated by a vote of 75 to 9 was a proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., calling for a zero deficit in the fiscal year which starts July 1.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, told Helms that a deficit was unavoidable.

So sharp a reduction in federal expenditures, he said, would result in an unemployment rate of 12 to 13 per cent and possibly 15 per cent. Tax collections would fall, he said—and a $40 billion deficit would then result.

Helms replied that Muskie was "using the same line that's been used for 30 to 35 years—that you can't balance the budget."

"Well, as they say in Monroe, North Carolina, 'can't, never will,'" he said.

In a statement, President Ford asked Congress to pledge to hold the deficit at the level he has proposed—$60 billion.

The resolution before the Senate would permit a $67.2 billion deficit and a House resolution would permit a $73.2 billion deficit.

But leaders of the congressional budget committee said their deficits were based on less optimistic assumptions than Ford's and would be in the same league if their assumptions about the economy's condition were the same as his.

Six persons die, 40 hurt in butane truck explosion

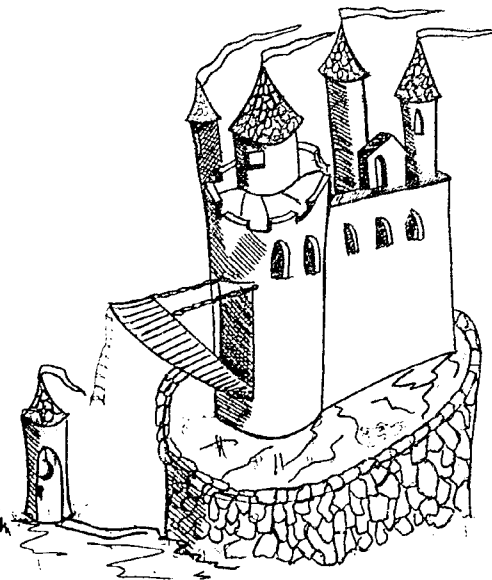

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (UPI) — Three more persons died Wednesday bringing the death toll to six in the explosion of a butane tank hurled like a fire ball 500 yards into a roadside trailer park.

The explosion of the tank was triggered by the wreck of its carrier. Besides the six dead, three of whom were killed in the crash Tuesday night, 40 others were injured, half of them critically burned.

The National Transportation

Safety Board dispatched investigators to the scene to begin "the same extremely detailed investigation as a catastrophic airline disaster."

The Texas Department of Public Safety said two Crystal City, Tex. residents were killed in the crash Tuesday evening. Three of the 21 persons airlifted to hospitals in San Antonio died later. The truck driver, Jesus Berduco of Piedras Negras, Mexico, was missing and presumed dead.

Nature for sale

Lot salesmen came looking for J. Alfred Migliore one day with the offer of a free lunch. That was the summer of 1973. At the development site, Migliore and his wife saw the jeeps rushing prospective buyers about and heard over the radios that the land was selling almost out from under their tires.

Migliore bought. Later he sued to get out of his contract. In his words, it took a "streak of luck" to reach a settlement with the developer. Migliore tells his story on page 13 as a warning to others who may face high-pressure sales tactics.

Americans who 'gave' to Vietnam are bitter, angry

By United Press International
Army veteran P l i m p t o n Graul Jr. Wednesday called Vietnam "the great American tragedy."
Most American fighting men and the families who lost them were angry and bitter that the United States had spent more than 50,000 lives, $150 billion and 14 years to save Vietnam from the Communists, and failed.
"I risked my life for a cause I thought was just," said Ed Sanborn of Lansing, Mich., who fought with the 199th Infantry in Vietnam. "Now I see that it wasn't."

Quincy, Collins, a retired Air Force officer from Georgia who was held for seven years as a prisoner of war, believes the United States didn't give enough.
"The inaction of our administration and our Congress made my time there a waste," Collins said. "The minute we left, we opened the door for the Communist onslaught. That's the minute we became a second-rate nation."

The Americans who suffered most —former hawks and former doves —were relieved that the end had come.
"We should have gone all the way or stayed the hell out of that war," said Fred W. Burns of Merrick, N.Y., who lost his only son in Vietnam on Christmas Eve, 1967.
"I'm glad it's over," said Graul, 27, a former infantryman from Greenville, Pa. "It was the Great American tragedy. We made a mistake when we went there in the first place."

"We lost a lot of friends and brothers over there," said Dan Griffith of Boise, Idaho, a Navy veteran of Vietnam. "It makes me think all those guys who burned their draft cards and went to Canada were right."
"My son was against the war but he never would do anything to try to avoid the draft," said Mrs. Leonard X. Freeman of Lakewood, Ohio. Her only son, Jeffrey, 25, was killed in the Central Highlands in April,

1970. "I'm just glad to see the killing stopped."
There were those who sought a meaning to the war.
"I hope our government learns something from our involvement," said Capt. John Parsels, who is stationed at Ft. McPherson, Ga. He was a prisoner of war for three years in North Vietnam. "We should have learned from the French not to go in with maximum power on the side that the people did not support. We should have picked the winning team. Ho Chi Minh wanted our support and we didn't give it. North Vietnam won because they had the support of the people."

Thomas Williams of Rocky Hill, Conn., served 18 months as a Marine in Vietnam. He said "only six or seven of my platoon came back alive."
"We lost them for nothing," he said of the dead. "I don't think the United States will make that mistake again."
"I hope to God it doesn't hurt us severely on the international scene," said Army Capt. Larry Wilson, 32, of Columbus, Ohio., who is a military history instructor in the ROTC program at the University of Illinois. He served two tours in Vietnam and said he commanded the last helicopter assault company to leave Vietnam in 1972. "I think morally the U.S. pullout was wrong. I don't agree with saying one thing and then pulling the rug out from under human beings."

Chester and Elizabeth Quellet of Wellsley, Mass., lost their son David, a Navy seaman, in March, 1967. He was awarded a posthumous Congressional Medal of Honor. They think America's effort was worth it, even if it meant the life of their son.

"We feel what he did over there helped others," said Mrs. Quellet.
"Nothing can change what David did to try to make the world a better place for others," said his father. "We're just trying to forget it and what it did to us."

What's news

Ford proud of decision

WASHINGTON — President Ford authorized U.S. military forces to help thousands of South Vietnamese leave their doomed capital to save their lives and "is proud he did it," his chief spokesman said Wednesday. Ford took the action Tuesday without congressional approval of his request for revision of American military forces in Indochina. Top administration officials had said earlier that the law clearly had to be changed to permit such a move. But Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters Wednesday in response to reporters questions: "He did it because those people would have been killed otherwise and he is proud he did it." Asked to provide a legal justification, he said with apparent irritation, "I'm citing a moral rationale for it."

Nixon made Viet promises

WASHINGTON — President Richard M. Nixon promised "swift and retaliatory action" against any renewed Communist aggression in South Vietnam, according to two confidential Nixon letters made public Wednesday by a former Saigon government official. Dr. Nguyen Tien Hung, once executive assistant to former South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, said Congress may never have known of these private pledges. But he said Saigon took Nixon's word that U.S. military force would be used, if necessary, to enforce the Paris peace accords. At the White House, press secretary Ron Nessen said the Nixon letters released by Hung "appear to be genuine" but add nothing to what is already publicly known about U.S. policy statements on Vietnam.

Doctors begin strike

SAN FRANCISCO — Doctors began leaving hospital operating rooms and hanging up their white smocks Wednesday in a strike aimed at skyrocketing malpractice insurance rates. After the morning surgery schedule, many San Francisco Bay Area anesthesiologists went home and vowed to stay off the job until insurance premium increases scheduled to go into effect Thursday are lowered. "I just did my last case," said Dr. Everett Ellis, an anesthesiologist at Pacific Medical Center. "Most of us have already stopped working."

Bishop defies church court order

WASHINGTON — The presiding Bishop of the three-million-member Episcopal Church Wednesday defied the order of an ecclesiastical court by failing to appear at a trial of a priest charged with allowing a woman to celebrate Holy Communion. Defense lawyers for the Rev. William Wendt, rector of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, sought to call the Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, head of the church, to testify on the question of the ordination of women.

FEA official backs 'energy stamps'

NEW CASTLE, Pa. — Joseph A. LaSala, regional administrator in Philadelphia for the Federal Energy Administration, Wednesday endorsed the use of an "energy stamp" program to help the poor meet rising utility costs. LaSala said he considered the proposed program, similar to federal Food Stamps, as an effective system of permitting utilities to increase prices without putting undue burden on the poor.

Police party

MINEOLA, N.Y. — The barbecue had the usual trappings — hot dogs, hamburgers, soda, beer, even a little hard liquor. But the time was a little unusual — 2:30 a.m. to 6 a.m. So were the participants — 20 on-duty police officers. And so was the entertainment — a torrid striptease dance by a barmaid. After the dance, according to Nassau County Police Commissioner Louis J. Frank, five cops had sexual relations with the barmaid in a police car. Frank said the barbecue was held last Aug. 14 in a remote area behind the A. Holly Patterson Home for the Aged, a county institution in Uniondale, N.Y.

War declared on pigeons

HARRISBURG — The state is about to renew its war against an enemy that has left its mark on every government office. Pigeons. The feathered creatures might be cute in a park, but they are a messy nuisance to the status and buildings in the Capitol complex here. Enter Edmund Kulpa, aide to Secretary Ronald Lench in the Property and Supplies Department. He's been given the job of devising a way to get rid of the thousands of pigeons that call the Capitol home. Kulpa said Wednesday he's thinking of buying large cages and putting them on the top of state buildings to trap the birds.

'Rich and poor' abolished

PHNOM PENH — The Khmer Rouge government of Cambodia has abolished "the rich and the poor" and Prince Norodom Sihanouk praised the decision Wednesday in a message from Peking. The new pro-Communist regime in Phnom Penh also released 610 foreigners who spent two weeks in cramped conditions at the French embassy and the Paris government sent an official to Thailand to direct relief operations.

Ford Motor reports loss

DETROIT — The Ford Motor Co. reported Wednesday that a sharp drop in sales and higher costs pushed it into a pre-tax loss of $158 million in the first quarter — the biggest three-month deficit since the No. 2 auto firm went public in 1956. Because of a change in accounting methods, the loss amounted to only $11 million after tax credits were considered. However, the $158 million pre-tax loss compared with a pre-tax profit of $236 million in the first quarter of 1974.

Another millionaire after Jackie

LONDON — Daily Express columnist William Hickey said Wednesday that Greek shipping millionaire John C. Carras would seek the hand in marriage of twice-widowed Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Hickey said Carras, described as aged around 60 and one of the world's richest shipowners, and a friend of the late Aristotle Onassis, has told friends his next goal is to make Mrs. Onassis his wife.

Moscow 'goes easy' on U.S.

Nations hasten to recognize V.C. regime

By United Press International
The Communist world hailed the fall of Saigon Wednesday, and non-Communist nations hastened to recognize new Viet Cong regime in South Vietnam.
In Hanoi, jubilant Vietnamese took to the streets in their best clothes and the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug called the North Vietnamese capital "at the moment the noisiest and most joyous city in the world."

Firecrackers and rockets crackled all over Hanoi, people hugged and kissed in the street, flags fluttered, music sounded from loudspeakers and hundreds of thousands attended a mass rally in the city's biggest square in front of the national theater, Tanjug said.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said the fall of Saigon was inevitable but went easy on the United States. There was only an oblique reference to the American participation in the Vietnam war.
"The events in South Vietnam confirm that these days a regime that rests only on foreign bayonets is utterly unviable," Tass said. "As was to be expected, the regime fell under the onslaught of liberation forces fighting for peace and democracy against colonialism, reaction and war."

Other state-controlled Communist news media were blunter. The Hungarian newspaper Esti Hirkap said the United States "has paid a terrible and shocking price for a shameful adventure that had been doomed to failure right from the start and because of which millions of Vietnamese had to shed their blood."

"And all this simply because the United States, on the basis of misinterpreted political aims, built its own commitment in Southeast Asia on daydreams of sandcastles," the Budapest paper said.

Peking's New China News Agency announced in a "flash" monitored in Hong Kong that the Communist "army and people completely liberated Saigon" and said the Viet Cong flag flew "over the puppet presidential house and the whole city."

Among the non-Communist nations, India, Sweden, Finland and Norway immediately recognized the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government while Britain and Japan considered following suit. Neighboring Laos also recognized the new Saigon regime.
Of the remaining rightist regimes in Asia, Singapore Defense Minister Goh Keng-swee said all Southeast Asian nations can expect increased Communist pressure. Taiwan Foreign Minister Shen Chang-mhuan said the fall of Saigon proves that any compromise with the Communists leads to disaster.
But Philippine Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo said he welcomed Saigon's surrender "so that more lives will be spared. We would like to see this tragedy end for the good of both sides."
Indonesian Foreign Minister Adam Malik also said, "For us, there will be no problem, whoever is in power."

Indo aid issue revived

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress revived the Indochina aid issue Wednesday with proposals to offer millions of dollars in relief for war victims in Communist-controlled South Vietnam and Cambodia.
While some congressional leaders tried to retool the old humanitarian aid proposals to fit the new situation, one senator —Jacob Javits, R-N.Y. —recommended passage of the outdated aid bill in order to preserve its restrictions on presidential authority to order military evacuations.
In the Senate, the Foreign Relations Committee unanimously approved a proposal authorizing $50 million in relief for war victims in Cambodia. Senators said the committee decided to hold the proposal, however, until the House either kills or passes the original $327 million Vietnam humanitarian aid bill.
In the House, Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., chairman of the International Relations Committee, urged that chamber pass the original $327 million aid and evacuation bill in its entirety or draw up a replacement to aid war victims in Vietnam and Cambodia.

Many well-dressed, 'well-heeled'

Concern mounts over Viet refugees

By United Press International
A stream of Vietnamese refugees, many of them well dressed, well educated and well heeled, flowed into United States Wednesday amid growing speculation about how they were chosen and how they —and the thousands to follow—will fit into recession-ridden America.
The rest—some who escaped on anything that would fly or float—were on their way from across the Pacific and Southeast Asia.
Those who escaped the downfall of Vietnam and flew to the United States varied from a mail order bride to the wife of former South Vietnamese premier Nguyen Cao Ky.
Others included South Vietnamese military officers loaded with gold and civilians who sported expensive jewelry.

In Washington, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the number of South Vietnamese rescued before the fall of Saigon "couldn't be beyond 60,000 to 70,000."
He said it was more likely that the number would be about 56,000 men, women and children.
"We had a moral obligation to these people who relied on us for 15 years," Kissinger said.
State Department officials estimated it would cost at least $500 million over the next year to care for the refugees.
A planeload of 70 refugees arrived in California Wednesday and a least five more were due in, including a Pan American 747 carrying 360 persons.
More than 350 of the 813 refugees who landed in California Tuesday left for homes across the country by rented cars, buses and commercial flights.

Many of them were Americans, or the wives and children of Americans who had completed medical examinations and immigration procedures at resettlement centers in Asia, officials said.
Others were housed at Camp Pendleton, the sprawling Marine base near former President Richard Nixon's San Clemente home, where additional tent cities were being built.
No Vietnamese who is not a dependent of an American citizen will be allowed off the base until the government has arranged for resettlement, a Marine spokesman said.
Hundreds of military men prepared other temporary quarters for refugees at Ft. Chaffee, Ark., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.
As the first groups of Vietnamese arrived, some American political leaders and private citizens criticized the airlift, claiming that either the refugees would have been better off taking their chances in Saigon, or that they were coming into areas already hard-hit by joblessness.

In Sacramento, Calif., the administration of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Wednesday proposed an amendment to a federal Vietnamese refugee aid bill to provide "jobs first for Americans."
State Health and Welfare Secretary Mario Obledo said the plan would require the federal government to create one new job for an American for every employable Vietnamese or Cambodian refugee in a particular state.
Others wondered just exactly how they were chosen.
At Clark Air Base in the Philippines, an American sergeant said he walked through a barracks housing refugees and "was propositioned three times by Vietnamese girls in their 20's. I'm not saying I saw a brothel but it looked like one. It may just be that they were propositioning me because they need money," he said.
"I come from a journalistic family and newspaper reporters ought to walk around and look around and see things for themselves. If I can walk through and see the diamonds, the gold bracelets and the jewelry on these people, then so can the reporters," he said.

Communists parade through 'old' Saigon

SAIGON (UPI) — At the height of the U.S. involvement, it was a garish half-mile of bars and pretty hostesses. Wednesday Tu Do Street was the parade route for victorious Viet Cong soldiers riding Russian-made tanks.
The Americans were gone. Government soldiers who fought alongside them also were trying to disappear by shedding their uniforms and boots and fading into the civilian crowds that watched the Communist celebration.
The tanks crunched over the uniforms, grinding them into the asphalt.
It was the end of the war. No more bar girls. No more Americans. And from the Viet Cong point of view, no more Saigon. A Communist radio broadcaster said the capital had been renamed Ho Chi Minh City, in honor of the revolutionary leader who led the Communists through 29 of the 35 years of war.
The smiling tank crews shouted "Hello, comrades" to the bystanders. Some waved back. Others stood quietly, still stunned by the swift turn of events that saw the Communists roll victoriously—and almost unopposed—into the city at high noon.

One Saigon police colonel couldn't take it. He put a pistol to his head and, standing in the main downtown square, blew his brains out.
Communist tanks crashed through the walls and rolled onto the tree-lined grounds of the presidential palace. There, several dozen captured government soldiers squatted on the grass under rifles of Viet Cong guards.
Atop the palace itself flew the Viet Cong flag—red and blue, a huge gold star emblazoned on its center.
Vu Van Mau was prime minister of the last Saigon government. It ruled less than two days before President Duong Van Minh announced surrender. Mau went on the air to tell the people, "The entire city of Saigon has been completely liberated. We have agreed to surrender without conditions."
He said they should "welcome this day of peace."

Newsman stayed behind

By United Press International
Four United Press International newsmen were among the handful of Americans who remained in Saigon Wednesday to report the end of 35 years of war and the installation of a Communist regime in South Vietnam. They found themselves still ducking for cover.
The four included UPI Asia General News Editor Leon Daniel, Saigon Bureau Chief Alan Dawson and correspondents Paul Vogle and Charles Huntley. With them was Dutch-born photographer Hugh Van Es.
"Nothing to worry about. We'll get out in due time," Daniel messaged at one point over communications links that came and went. The news circuit went down for a second time shortly before 8 a.m. EDT Wednesday and had not resumed more than eight hours later.
The UPI team found that while the war had ended, the danger had not. At one point, Dawson made his way to Viet Cong headquarters in the presidential palace to discuss news and picture communications when shooting erupted.
"I spent 10 minutes flopped on my belly in what I hope is the last firefight of my career," he messaged later.

PARC has plans for Pike

MILFORD — After nearly a year of organization, the Pike County Chapter of the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Citizens (PARC) is initiating two programs designed to aid the mentally handicapped. — a day care center and a recreation program.

"It took awhile, but I think we are finally getting our feet off the ground," said Rev. John Edwards, chairman of PARC.

With a day care center for retarded adults scheduled to open July 15 and a recreation program to begin in the fall, Rev. Edwards is optimistic that PARC will become a viable county-wide organization.

A PARC committee is currently investigating the possibility of leasing a house in Milford for a day care center that would open from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

"It appears the committee has found a suitable site, but since we haven't signed a lease yet it's not definite," Rev. Edwards said.

The proposed day care center for mentally retarded adults would be funded by the Tri-County Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) budget and a state grant, according to Rev. Edwards.

About 15 adults are expected to use the center that will provide recreational activities, work in arts and crafts and training in practical skills such as homemaking.

Two paid staff members and three or four volunteers will man the facilities on a daily basis.

A PARC committee has also been organized to establish a once a week recreation program for mentally retarded youth in the county.

"The need for such a program is great, but we probably won't be able to get it started until the fall," Edwards explained.

However, Donna Jetter, a student at Delaware Valley High School, has informed PARC members that several students would be willing to help staff the recreational program once it is organized.

The students are also interested in forming a youth PARC auxiliary to serve the needs of mentally retarded.

Rev. Edwards feels there are about 30 persons in the county that would use PARC services when they are offered.

He noted that the group's agenda also includes branching out into other areas in addition to mental illness.

With only 25 active members in the chapter, some members feel that PARC's activities should be limited to caring for the mentally ill.

However, Rev. Edwards said the organization is moving toward serving those with learning disabilities and emotional disturbances as well.

"I realize we can't take on too much at once, but we feel an obligation to try to offer services not found elsewhere in the county," Rev. Edwards said.

He noted that one committee under the direction of Rev. James Maxwell is concerned with the implementation of the Right to Education Act in Pike County.

The committee is currently researching whether mentally retarded children in the county are receiving adequate training and educational opportunities in the Delaware Valley School District.

The committee is interviewing school officials, researching school reports available to the public and writing letters to local and state officials as part of its work.

BRODHEADSVILLE — The latest word on that bumpy road by the Gilbert cemetery is that the Pennsylvania Department of Highways may allow the Polk Township supervisors to fix it themselves, and PennDOT will simply reimburse them for the work.

Supervisor Charlie Green says he is ready to top the stretch as soon as the township gets the reimbursement from the highway department.

But that's not all there is to the story, folks. The word is that the Polk Township supervisors are going to investigate having the cinder pile moved so that the heavy state highway vehicles don't have to continually travel over that stretch of township road that has been so badly torn up.

The supervisors would also be satisfied if the highway department could get right-of-way through the old Gilbert race track property to provide direct access to Rte.209. We'll keep you informed of the developments.

There's a completely new architectural design planned for a new home at Hemlock Lake and when the new owner takes a look at it, he may gasp in horror and wonder if the builder had to provide him with three-foot high bunkers of earth that cover part of his front windows.

At least that was the picture that Polk contractor Leonard Strauffer presented to his local township officials at a special meeting this week, when he told about a new resident who had to have an alternate sewage system installed on a Hemlock Lake lot. Stauffer said the special sewage installation would have meant that three-feet high mounds of dirt would have been piled either in front or behind the house the resident had planned to build.

Since the lot owner didn't know anything about septic systems and since he planned to put in a home on a flat slab foundation, Stauffer said he would be in for a big surprise when the home was completed and he saw that the sewage mounds "come up halfway past his bedroom window."

Stauffer said he advised the lot owner against building the slab type of home with the alternate system, but he described the situation in detail so the Polk supervisors would institute a building permit ordinance to help new residents with similar problems.

Stauffer contended that when new residents learn there is no building permit in the township, they think there are no regulations and are shocked when they find out they have to have a sewage permit.

The supervisors agreed informally to look into establishing a building permit ordinance for Polk Township and it is expected to be discussed at the next regular meeting in June.

Some residents in Robin Hood Lake may be moving to Carbon County in the near future whether they want to or not. The rumors are that the county line at the development may be moved in the near future, and it is a possibility, since that boundary line has been disputed here for years.

That installation banquet the Jaycees are sponsoring will be held on May 31 at the Polk Township Firehouse. Annual awards will be presented at that time.

And speaking of Jaycees, did you know that the New Jersey Jaycees have purchased Camp Massad in Effort? The camp will now be known as Camp Jaycee and will be used to send New Jersey city children to the West End for the summer.

In order to raise money for the camp, the Jersey service clubs are collecting bonus grocery coupons. For every 600 points collected, the Jaycees will receive $1.08.

Word has it that the Western Pocono Jaycees are also helping to collect coupons for the camp. If you have any of the following that you would like to donate, give them to any Jaycees: All, Arrid, Chiquita bananas, Diet Rite Cola, Domino sugar, Heinz barbecue sauce and baby cereal, Hills Brothers coffee, Nabisco Biscuits, Lorna Doones and Peanut Creams, Mister Salty Pretzels, Pepsi-Cola, Purina dog and cat chow, Renuzit air freshener, Welch's jelly, jam and juice and Wheat, Rice and Corn Chex.

BLAKESLEE — Howard Kerrick is quiet and unpretentious. He is reluctant to speak about himself, yet as he talks the qualities that make boys into men is evident.

Kerrick, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Kerrick of Blakeslee and will graduate from Pocono Mountain High School in June.

Although he has the opportunity to attend college, he prefers to go out into the world and make his mark as a carpenter.

Kerrick takes pride in his own initiative, wanting to accomplish on his own.

In school he has participated in sports, preferring wrestling and track.

"In these sports you are basically on your own and this is important to me," he said. "I like to compete as an individual."

He has also participated in team sports and finds this good training since you are taught discipline and how to work with others.

Sports are important to Kerrick, "It helps you grow," he remarked.

"Wayne Boyd, my coach, has been an inspiration to me," Kerrick said. "He set goals for us and works with us to accomplish them."

"Growing up to me means being out of school, on your own, being self-supporting, and making decisions," he said.

"I want security and that means having everything I need and owing no man," he added.

Kerrick has no fears of getting a job upon graduation. "I've done carpentry during summer vacations, I've always been able to get work."

"The people in the area know me and I'm called on to do jobs. This is good experience and references, people get to know me and the type of work I can do."

Although the youngest of four children Kerrick doesn't feel this has been a disadvantage.

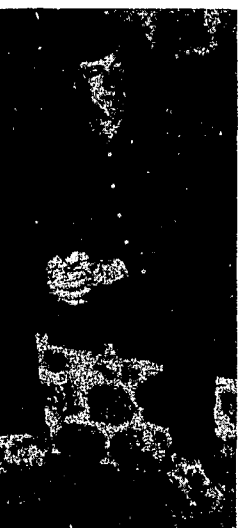

"I've been able to learn from my brothers' and sister's mistakes," he remarked.

Kerrick feels his parents have taught him all the qualities needed to cope with challenges of the future.

"My parents have taught me self-confidence, in order to believe in myself," he said.

Kerrick has not been forced into something he didn't want. He has been lead gently into his chosen field. He has been lead to believe to do what he is told and do it well. From this comes the confidence needed to grow.

His parents, he said, have encouraged him to be enthusiastic by not ridiculing him.

Howard Kerrick

"Compassion is strengthened if it is practiced in the home," he said. "Then it will be carried into the outside world."

Kerrick feels respect is a word that seems to be going out of style.

"Respect is a quiet conviction," he said. "We must be taught respect because this quality conditions a person's attitude toward life."

"I've been made to realize that certain values are worthy of esteem and must be preserved."

Kerrick has respect for quality workmanship in his chosen profession. It is the feeling of respect for himself and the work he does for others that is important in order to be a reciprocal product.

He also feels a sense of humor is important in order to make one resilient.

"It should be passed on to others, it is an important part of man's makeup," he said.

If Kerrick could sit down and talk to one person it would be Abraham Lincoln.

"He believed in his convictions and struggled through a rugged life to achieve."

Celebrating our nation's 200th birthday to Kerrick means thinking things out.

"A lot has happened since 1776," he said.

"If Lincoln could come back, he would say 'you guys really messed up my country.' But I think he would want to stay and help."

President Gerald Ford told 600 high school students from his hometown of Grand Rapids, Mich. that our country needs young Americans to help solve its problems.

Kerrick agrees. "Young Americans have a lot to offer and should be heard. The young people have a lot of qualities lacking in older people."

He feels his community is lacking in not having a recreational program or facilities for the young people.

"It would be good because allowing young people to contribute and participate would keep them out of trouble," he said.

Kerrick feels some people enter into local government just for personal gain, not for the interest of the people.

"But only the people themselves can correct this," he remarked. "People are aware, but just don't bother to become involved. They always want someone else to do it."

"If we don't become involved how can we help others," he added.

Kerrick noted that too many parents have the "I don't care" attitude, therefore instilling the same attitude in their children.

"We should all be made aware of what has happened in our country," he remarked. "But it is more important to us to look to the future and what is going to happen."

Greene planners survey residents

GREENTOWN — Greene Township residents and property owners will be receiving a questionnaire in the mail during the first week of this month.

Mt. Pocono authority seeks grant

MOUNT POCONO — The Mount Pocono Municipal Authority had a special meeting Tuesday, passed a resolution to execute necessary documents for an additional grant up to a maximum of $7,500 from the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) for sewerage construction.

Ray Gross, authority chairman, told residents present the authority is eligible under law for 60 per cent funding from DER, but that does not necessarily mean they will receive the full percentage.

Grants received for the $2.9 million sewerage project nearing completion in the borough, are approximately one and three quarters million leaving an indebtedness for the borough of approximately $1 million.

Gross and Edward Schmidt, authority member, said all sources for additional grants have been fully explored by the authority, borough council and the Mount Pocono Taxpayers' Assn.

Gross said it is anticipated that hook-up notices for users east of Rte. 611 will be sent out this week by borough council.

He added the authority will probably start working on the formula for the monthly usage charge residents will have to pay, at the meeting May 13.

Gross cautioned residents who will be connecting to the system to be aware of the fact that plumbers soliciting door to door for plumbing work is against borough ordinance. All plumbers must make application with the borough.

These questionnaires represent weeks of concentrated effort by the local planning commission in preparation of the 55 questions covering the complete range of problems facing the community, on law enforcement to proposed land uses.

The information obtained from this survey will form a basis for future action of both the planning commission and board of supervisors.

The survey is unique in one feature. It is probably the first effort on the part of any local government to involve the youth of the community.

A joint effort on the part of the Pike County Extension Service, Wallenpaupack Area High School, and the Greene Township planning commission has resulted in the direct involvement of students from the school's senior class.

The time spent by the students is on a voluntary basis.

The survey is the beginning of a co-operative effort between the planning commission and the high school. Future classes will be incorporated into the program for similar studies and projects.

Township officials feel local government probably the area given the least attention in normal high school curriculum.

It is anticipated that between one third and two thirds of the questionnaires will be returned.

Township officials want the local residents and property owners to be heard. They have stated that a 100 per cent return of questionnaires will show that residents do want to become involved.

Presidential image not all

President Ford is one to put on airs. The White House public relations apparatus is constantly on guard against such heretical notions. Scarcely a day passes without some new reminder — printed or televised — that the President of the United States is affable, gregarious and photogenic.

A good deal of Ford's image as a down-to-earth President is attributable to his personal photographer, David Hume Kennerly. With ready access to the President on both public and private occasions, Kennerly has produced numerous pictures of the first family. Outside photographers also have been permitted to snap away at the Fords to their hearts' content. Picture layouts of the Fords at work and play have appeared in a number of publications, and at least one book of photographs is in preparation.

This incessant shufflerbugging accords with the President's professed policy of openness and candor. But there is more to it than that. According to The New York Times, White House officials believe Ford's personality "comes through in pictures, and that this is his best 'selling point.'"

Perhaps "selling" is not the best word to use. Ever since the publication of Joe McGinniss's book, "The Selling of the President 1968," the subject of political image-making has been a touchy one among public officials. McGinniss dissected the elaborate media campaign that preceded Richard Nixon's first election as President, but he made it clear that the same techniques could be employed by others seeking high office.

A candidate appearing on television, McGinniss wrote, "is measured not against his predecessors — not against a standard of performance established by two centuries of democracy — but against (TV talk-show host) Mike Douglas. How well does he handle himself? Does he mumble, does he twitch, does he make me laugh? Do I feel warm inside? Style becomes substance. The medium is the message and the masseur gets the votes."

Elaborate image-building campaigns often are a waste of time, however, for the public's early impressions of a politician on television tend to be lasting. Nixon, for example, looked and spoke well in his last three televised debates with John F. Kennedy during the 1960 presidential election campaign. But he had appeared wan and on the defensive in the first debate, and that is the one most voters remembered on election day.

President Johnson, who acknowledged his "shortcomings as a communicator," seemed stiff and ill at ease when he used the news-conference format that worked so well for Kennedy. He then took to wearing a small microphone under his jacket so that he could stroll about freely and emphasize points with sweeping gestures. Contrary to the hopes of White House advisers, viewers seemed unimpressed by these televised glimpses of "the real Johnson."

By all accounts, the President Ford one sees on television and in photographs is the same Good Old Jerry who was one of the House of Representatives' most popular members. All that warmth and plain-spokenness are for real. But Presidents, no less than actors, should beware the pitfalls of type-casting. Whether they like it or not, all chief executives must employ guile on occasion. And voters may not tolerate much deviousness in a President who insists on being judged by his candor.

Advanced accounting

By GENE BROWN
Ottaway News Service

A restaurant owner from the "Old Country" kept his accounts payable in a cigar box on the left side of the cash register, his daily cash returns in the cash register, and his receipts for paid bills in another cigar box on the right.

His accountant son, appalled by his father's primitive book-keeping system, remarked one day: "I don't see how you can run a business that way. How do you know what your profits are?"

"Well, son," the father replied, "when I got off the boat from Greece, I had nothing but the pants I was wearing."

"Today, your brother is a doctor."
"Your sister is a speech therapist."
"You are an accountant."
"Your mother and I have a nice car, a city house, a country home. We have a good business and everything is paid for."
"So you add all that together, subtract the pants, and there's your profit."

Female retribution

The young girl smiled sweetly at the long line as she stepped into the phone booth. "Don't worry," she said, "I just want to hang up on him."

Mock Soviet nuclear attack puzzles U.S. intelligence

WASHINGTON — Intercepted messages and reconnaissance reports reveal that the gigantic month-long Soviet naval exercise, just concluded, was a mock nuclear attack on the United States.

Other ominous intelligence reports compiled by the Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency and State Department show that the Russians also are constructing supersophisticated, bomb-proof underground installations around Moscow.

These awesome activities have American intelligence analysts gravely perplexed. "We live with the possibility of nuclear war every day," one top intelligence official told us. "But no one really believes it will ever happen. Now here are the Russians actually practicing for such a thing. It's really scary."

Our sources caution, however, against jumping to any conclusion about the developments in Russia. The Soviets, they say, show no indication that they are abandoning the detente with the United States. On the contrary, the dismissal of Kremlin hardliner Alexander Shelepin, according to intelligence analyses, suggests that Moscow still wants friendly relations with the West.

More ships were involved in the mock nuclear attack than have ever been deployed in Soviet naval history. Not even the United States, with all its allies, has ever held such large-scale maneuvers.

Over 220 Russian vessels participated in the

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

worldwide exercises, including the most powerful cruisers, destroyers and submarines in the Russian fleet.

They sailed from their home ports into the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, the North Sea, the Indian ocean and the Mediterranean and zeroed in on American sea lanes.

Soviet battle groups, playing the role of U.S. warships, were dispatched throughout the seven seas. Then, longrange Russian reconnaissance aircraft located and intercepted them.

Significantly, some of the Soviet planes operated out of bases in Cuba, Guinea, East Africa and the Soviet Union itself. The use of Cuba as a military base, some sources pointed out, comes close to violating the Monroe Doctrine.

Throughout the exercise, Soviet planes and ships engaged in simulated attacks.

The scenario they used, the intercepted messages show, was a nuclear war. And the compelling drama began with a simulated Soviet nuclear attack on the United States.

Official spokesmen refused to confirm that the spectacular exercise was a mock nuclear war. But our sources say they are worried about Russian sensibilities.

Around Moscow, meanwhile, the Kremlin is building a reported 27 subterranean facilities which are designed, say our sources, to be used as command centers in the event of nuclear war.

The United States also has underground command posts, but they are far inferior to the sophisticated Soviet centers.

Some of the subterranean shelters are marked by acres of antennae and are referred to by U.S. analysts as "antennae farms." Some of the antennae are for low-frequency communications, which will enable the Soviets to stay in touch with their submarines.

Beatle Blues: John Lennon, one of the survivors of the tuneless Beatles, has been singing the blues since 1972.

U.S. immigration authorities had started to deport him for a minor drug offense in England. But because of his clean record and his appeal, the deportation order was stayed.

Then, in 1972, the Justice Department began treating him like Public Enemy No. 1. Even the White House, it appears, became involved in the attempt to throw him out of the country.

Lennon never knew why he had suddenly become so undesirable until we reported last August that Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., had stirred up the Justice Department. We have now learned more of the fascinating details.

Old Ramrod not only wrote to then-Atty. Gen. John Mitchell about Lennon but also enclosed a secret memo assailing the singer. We have now learned that the memo was prepared by the Senate Internal Security Committee, the last bulwark of McCarthyism on Capitol Hill.

Although the memo is still secret, our sources say it linked Lennon falsely to radical groups that wanted to disrupt the 1972 Republican convention.

Less than 10 days after Mitchell received Thurmond's letter, along with the accompanying smear sheet, Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst began action on Lennon.

One missive was addressed to Raymond Farrell, who was then the nation's immigration chief. A copy of the secret, anti-Lennon memo, according to a Justice Department document in our possession, "was also sent to one Bill Timmons, who is not further identified."

As the Justice Department is well aware, President Nixon's top legislative lobbyist was named Bill Timmons. We made several attempts to reach him to ask about his possible role in the case, but he never returned our calls.

Now the smear memo which started Lennon's troubles has mysteriously disappeared from the Justice Department's locked files. "A search for this staff memorandum within the Justice Department has been unsuccessful," confessed Special Asst. U.S. Atty. Mary Maguire in a letter to Judge Richard Owen who is presiding over the Lennon case.

Lennon's lawyer, Leon Wildes, has been rebuffed, meanwhile, in an attempt to get the vital evidence in the case. In words reminiscent of Nixon's coverup days, the Justice Department has reported that it is considering whether to "invoke a formal claim of executive or government privilege."

Whither foreign policy?

Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON — When we begin to look at tomorrow, not just at yesterday, here is one overriding question we must answer soon:

Have we been so burned — and, perhaps, burned out — by Vietnam that we will yield to the temptation of trying to resign our world leadership?

And other questions like these: Does the failure of our defense of South Vietnam mean that the United States will never go to the aid of a nation which is the target of Communist expansion-by-force?

Because we have learned that the United States can't do everything, are we going to make the mistake of thinking we can't do anything to deter aggression?

Are we going to emerge from Vietnam so divided and depressed that we will concede the major initiative to our adversaries and wishfully hope that things won't go too badly if we look the other way?

There is no assurance which way U.S. foreign policy will turn. There is visible isolationism in the mood of the country and of the Congress. In a weary reaction to the tragedy of Vietnam, it is plain that many would like, if possible, to stop the world and get off. A recent Harris poll shows that a near majority of Americans would look with detachment on a Soviet takeover of West Berlin and an Arab conquest of Israel.

United States

What kind of an American foreign policy are we talking about? My view is that, while the United States must not and should not jump into every war that threatens, the premise of American foreign policy is that we should stand ready to give material assistance to nations with a will to defend themselves.

The objective of such a policy has been expounded by several of our most able secretaries of state. Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson put it this way:

"The primary object of American foreign policy is too create a situation in the world in which the great experiment in freedom can survive and flourish."

That was the object of NATO — to insure the freedom of Western Europe. It succeeded.

That was the object of aid to Greece and Turkey in 1947. It succeeded.

That was the object of the Marshall Plan. It succeeded.

That was the object of our defense of South Korea when outside military forces violated its frontier. It succeeded.

That was the object of the Berlin airlift. It succeeded.

That was the object of our going to the defense of South Vietnam. It failed.

Should we throw away a policy with such a significant record of success?

How to start inflation-fighting food cooperative

(Second in a series of two columns)

Sylvia Porter

Let's say you are eager to benefit from the 30-per-cent-plus reduction in food prices and the better food quality a food buying co-operative might give you. You're also ready to donate an hour or two of your time every week or several hours every month to plan your food buying, to fit a schedule, and to accept the food selection set by a group.

But you've checked around and there is no existing co-op you can join. How do you start your own?

First, call your friends together to discuss it. Then consider and decide on these points:

Size of Your Group. Plan to start small. Generally, 12 to 20 families (or individuals) is about right. Your group will be large enough to make bulk purchases but small enough to do without a truck. Solicit more people through church or community newsletters or bulletin boards if you haven't enough members. But be careful. Your members must be compatible in personality and food tastes and be willing to do as much buying as possible through the co-op. This is essential for your survival.

potential savings to compensate a coordinator for his or her time.

Type of Food to Buy. Some co-ops concentrate on prices, striving to get what the supermarkets sell but at wholesale prices. Others try to get a better deal on specialties and organically-grown foods. Most groups start buying only non-perishable staples, move on to perishables as the organization improves. Few handle meat, which requires elaborate facilities and normally retails at only 15 per cent above wholesale.

Number of Items to be Handled. Keep your list to a reasonably limited number of items that group members use most. Go to the supermarket for low-volume purchases.

Whether to Hire Help. Volunteer help is a potent weapon against high prices — but not getting enough people to do the work is frequently the cause of a group's collapse. If your members don't have much time to contribute or if available time varies greatly from member to member, forfeit 10 per cent of your

How to Handle Your Finances. You'll need money to start up, for phone calls, scales, postage, mimeograph supplies, gas, possible legal fees, the like — and, of course, many of these expenses will continue for the life of the co-op. Most co-ops solve this problem by charging a membership fee, and then adding a fixed percentage to the cost of the food to cover operating expenses. Make this percentage more than adequate and then refund the surplus at a convenient interval, perhaps annually. If you adopt this method, you'll accumulate a small fund for unexpected expenses or purchases of equipment (a mimeo machine, for instance) if your co-op chooses. To avoid serious conflicts, insist on cash in advance on all orders.

Clear records

How to Keep Records. You must be businesslike and keep accurate, clear records. If none of you have bookkeeping experience, get a good manual. It may be sound to get a co-op checking account.

Whether or Not to Lease Space. Breaking down bulk purchases of food into individual orders takes room — but at the start, try to avoid leases or other expensive commitments. Use members' garages, basements, church community rooms (in return for a donation each time), local school facilities.

How to Organize. Although big co-ops usually incorporate, most small co-ops are informal clubs. Rotate jobs often, so the loss of a member or two will not mean a disastrous loss of skills, and no one member will be overworked. Define clearly the duties of each jobholder. You will need an overall coordinator and bookkeeper-treasurer on a fairly long-term basis. Also, for each ordering cycle, you'll want: an order taker; two or more buyers (may include order taker); breakdown crew to divide the bulk purchases; clean-up crew; cashier (who may be the bookkeeper); possibly babysitters and truck drivers. Make it clear who has what duties. Check your state tax office on what permits and licenses you'll need (if any) and whether you'll need to collect a sales tax.

A vital final point: a co-op is only as strong as the involvement of its members. Discuss your disagreements and don't be afraid to make changes as you go along.

'Safest' U.S. nuclear power plant source of poison

Editor, The Record:

Recently I came across an article in the July 1973 issue of Prevention Magazine, a reputable publication out of Emmaus. The research for the article was gathered by Harold J. Taub and I would like to share this information with the readers of this area because it is of immediate concern to our situation.

According to the Atomic Energy Commission, the Shippingport nuclear generating plant, near Aliquippa, is the safest in the U.S. The plant opened in 1958. In 1964, the town's health and mortality statistics correlated well with its size.

Aliquippa ranked 51st among 98 communities who kept such records, in the rate of immature births. It also ranked 34th in the number of leukemia victims. In 1970, Aliquippa had the third highest rate of leukemia and was fourth in immature births.

For early infancy diseases such as collapsing lung and asphyxiation shortly after birth, the town figures were 20.3 per 100,000 population in 1964, which was about normal. This figure jumped to 53.9 per 100,000 in 1970!

The Pennsylvania Bureau of Vital Statistics shows that for every 1,000 babies born in Aliquippa, 43.9 died in 1970, while in the rest of the state the rate was 20.2 per 1,000 born in the same year.

Is the nuclear power plant responsible?

A spokesman for the Duquesne Light Co., which owns the plant, says no. According to the Philadelphia Inquirer for Feb. 7, 1973, the light company blames the abnormal health and mortality statistics on an increase in the number of low-income black residents. They have higher mortality rates and infant diseases. The Inquirer found that in fact, the black population of Aliquippa had declined in the period 1958 to 1970.

Technical studies made by the National Utilities Service Corp. and sponsored by the light company found that in 1970 the level of Strontium-90 in the milk at six local dairies reached an all-time high, which was 75 per cent greater than the average for the region. During 1970, the Environmental Protection Agency certified that radiation emissions for the Shippingport plant were considered acceptable by the Atomic Energy Commission.

So, we are left with the fact that in the vicinity of the safest atomic power plant in the U.S., one where emissions of Strontium-90 would seem to be negligible, the radioactive mineral is still deposited on the grass in sufficient quantity so that it gets into the milk of the cows and becomes a definite health hazard to the children drinking that milk, as well as the unborn children of pregnant mothers who also drink milk. As a result more children are dying.

The utility companies need the increased supply of water from the Tocks Island Dam to efficiently operate the string of nuclear power plants they have planned for the length of the Delaware River. If we, the people, let this go through, we will be indirectly responsible for the results of these power plants.

I feel that The Pocono Record, as a direct public opinion molding source, would do well to review its stance on the Tocks Island Dam issue. Recently, and in the past, we have had some glaring examples of government agencies and utility companies not always presenting the public with all the facts. I suggest that The Pocono Record do some hard research on the long term effects of radioactive emissions on all life forms of this planet, before it is too late.

Dislikes verdict

Editor, The Record:

I find it exceedingly hard to believe that a jury of 12 individuals could return a verdict of not guilty in the recent obscenity trial.

I suppose anything is acceptable nowadays. Next year will bring radio advertisements of "Visit your corner porno store" and if mama is too busy reading her latest sex expose, send Junior for the Saturday night stag film.

I'm sure I sound harsh and cynical but the shock is still with me. I still have three undegraded children and pride myself with trying to instill in them the same value system that I was brought up on, but it becomes increasingly difficult.

The three elements needed for conviction were to quote Judge Williams; "The dominant theme must appeal to a prurient interest in sex; that the materials be patently offensive, meaning substantially beyond ordinary candor in the representation of sexual matters; and that they lack serious literary, artistic, scientific or political value."

Granted, I did not see the objects d'art but I'm sure they lack serious literary, artistic or scientific or political value.

Five years ago the jury would have brought in a verdict of guilty. I'm sorry to say that now Monroe County has established a precedent. What comes next?

Top dog tough on pushers

MIAMI (UPI) — If it weren't for his dark glasses and an old Army cap, Trep could pass for any other golden retriever. But beneath those shades lies a nose that has sniffed out $63 million worth of narcotics.

He is top dog in the canine drug interceptor corps. In less than two years as agent K9-3 on the Dade County (Metro) Organized Crime Force, the 7-year-old retriever's nose has led to the conviction of 20 drug dealers.

"Right now he's the number one police dog in the nation," said his owner-trainer, Metro deputy Tom Kazo. "He's already found $63 million worth but we'll probably retire him when he hits $100 million."

The gentle-looking animal is the only police dog trained to detect minute particles of narcotics in the air, much as a hunting dog tracks his prey, Kazo said. He is pictured wearing dark glasses on his ID card and often wears a slouch Army hat while working.

Trep, which is short for Intrepid, was responsible for a record $2 million hashish seizure in March, 1974. In that case, Trep located the illicit drug in a boat that had been searched four times by human agents. The hashish was wrapped in heavy plastic bags inside a double wall.

The canine agent also made legal history last month when a Circuit judge issued a search warrant on the basis of his sniffing power.

Police had received an anonymous tip that some suspicious-looking bundles had been dropped from a low-flying plane and transferred to a house. Officers, however, needed more than that for a warrant and Trep was put to work.

They walked the dog several times past the house and became convinced narcotics were involved on the basis of his reaction.

But Trep sometimes gets carried away with his detective work and some "embarrassing" moments result.

Kazo recalls that once while he was demonstrating the dog's ability to some police academy cadets Trep sniffed out 11 packets of marijuana. Kazo had only hidden 10.

Pennsy losses doubling

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Trustees of the bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co. Wednesday reported a $127,902,225 loss for the first quarter of 1975, nearly double that sustained in the same period last year.

The railroad lost $68,267, 672 in the first three months of 1974.

Freight revenue declined 3.2 per cent to $441.8 million from $456.5 million. Carloadings dropped 18.2 per cent.

Total revenues for the quarter were down 2.9 per cent to $509.7 million from $525.2 million for the quarter in 1974.

$16 million plan unveiled for Valley Forge Park

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A proposed $16 million master plan for the development and use of Valley Forge State Park was unveiled Wednesday by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission.

The plan, in preparation more than a year, was drawn up by the commission, the Valley Forge Park Commission and a Clarks Summit architectural engineering firm. It covers three phases: Bicentennial, post-bicentennial and a final period geared to development of a $3 million Park Museum and Cultural Center facility.

Farm price increase first in five months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farm commodity prices rose 4 per cent in the month ending April 15, reversing a five-month decline, the Agriculture Department reported Wednesday.

Officials said the recovery was led by increases in prices for cattle, hogs, cotton, soy beans and calves. Grains showed small gains, and reductions for eggs and milk failed to offset other increases.

Even after the April increase, however, the Agriculture Department's Crop Reporting Board said average prices for raw farm products were still 8.1 per cent below last October when the five-month drop began and 7 per cent below a year earlier.

The price slide had helped spur congressional passage of an emergency farm support bill which President Ford is expected to veto. It also had led in March to the first drop since last July in the average cost of a retail consumer food market basket.

Economists, viewing recent increases in beef prices, have warned the retail food price drop may be only temporary. But Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz says retail food prices for all of 1975 are now expected to average 7.5 to 9 per cent above 1974, much smaller than the increases of over 14 per cent registered in the past two years.

The PHRC said reconstruction of 900 huts that once housed Washington's troops would "be repetitive", and instead it will build 12 huts at Stirling's Pennsylvania Brigade, three at Washington's Life Guards, and 25 each at Weedon's Virginia troops, Glover's Massachusetts troops, McIntosh's Georgia and North Carolina troops and the Rhode Island encampment.

A total $165,000 is allocated for the painting, cleaning, drainage and floodlighting of the National Memorial Arch. The statue of Baron von Steuben will be moved from Wayne Woods to a new Artillery Park site on the Grand Parade.

The restoration of the Old Forge and the partial restoration of the Grist Mill will depend on flood control measures for Valley Creek, the commission said.

The master plan cautioned the state to "begin taking defensive action against the potentially detrimental effects of growing urbanization and industrialization."

The plan called for acquisition of 11 land parcels totaling 116 acres to reinforce the natural barriers of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, Mount Misery, County Line Expressway and the Schuylkill River.

Secrets Revealed

"Guide" helps people avoid being cheated

A revolutionary new book has just been written by Bill Triste. The title, 'The Loser's Guide to Winning' is not only descriptive, it is also a true indication of the contents.

If you were ever cheated in a business deal or lost money in a get rich quick scheme, this could be the very book for you. Following the author's advice, practically eliminates all the risk involved in making any business commitments, buying or investing.

The author writes in such a way, the reader is impressed with a feeling of direct communication. With a flair matched only by the better known authors, he catches your attention then leads you smoothly to the climax of each point. It is almost impossible to put it aside, until the last word has been read.

Bill Triste has a way of making the written word come alive. Frustration, anger and humor are just a few of the emotions he expresses so vividly. In addition to the good literary writing, he expertly reveals how dishonest business people can the average consumer time after time.

Very clearly and with precision, some obvious, and some little known facts are outlined. Defensive actions that should be taken are explained so well that anyone can easily understand. The old saying, 'to be forewarned is to be forearmed' certainly applies to making financial commitments.

The reader can almost feel the hate that the author has for the heartless people that are constantly on the prowl, just waiting for an opening to separate the hard working people from their money. No one is entirely safe but the low and middle income families are the most victimized. The reason for this is, their inability to afford everything they desire. Therefore, they are more apt to be lured into clever traps, baited with promised riches or large savings.

After reading 'The Loser's Guide To Winning,' one can not help but wish it had been published a long time ago.

Anyone wanting a copy of, 'The Losers Guide To Winning' can get one by sending a check or money order for $4.95 to:

Age differences

Dear Ann Landers: I am 25 years old. Joe is 42. Recently you've run some letters about couples with extreme age differences. If the man's preference happens to be a younger woman, it is immediately assumed that it's an ego trip for him or a search to regain his lost youth. The woman who is interested in an older man is a schemer, after his money, or both.

I have yet to see one article defending such relationships. Is it too remote a possibility to consider that perhaps such elements as dependability, wisdom, compatibility, maturity and even love might be the basis for some of these May-December and December-May marriages?

I've been out with dozens of men in my so-called "age group." They were immature, boring and exploitative. I feel very secure with my "older man." I wish you'd print this letter to help bolster others in the same boat.

He's Right For Me

Dear Right: Here's your letter. Consider yourself bolstered. According to recent statistics, marriages have a better chance if the age difference is under ten years. There are so many exceptions, however, that I would never foredoom a relationship because of the difference in age.

Dear Ann Landers: I travel a lot and catch your column in several different papers. I have seen at least a dozen different pictures of you and can't figure out why you look so good in some towns and so lousy in others. The towns where you look the loouiest are where they run those terrible drawings by a local artist. Los Angeles is the worst.

The Kansas City paper, Atlanta Journal and Washington Post don't print any pictures. Are they crazy? If it's space they're short of why don't they drop a few sentences and run the picture? Your column is a lot easier to find when a person can see your face. Before the Cincinnati paper began to use your photo, people thought you were a man.

The Chicago Sun-Times runs at least five different pictures of you a week and they are all good. At least they look like they are of the same person. The New York Daily News runs only one picture but it is excellent.

Please answer some questions: (a) How old are you? (b) Do you wear a wig? (c) Are you teeth your own? (d)

Why don't you send all the papers a new picture the way you look NOW? I've seen you on TV and you aren't bad.

20-20 Vision

Dear 20-20: (a) I will be 57 years old on July 4th. (b) I don't own a wig. (c) My teeth are my own. (d) A few months ago I sent a new picture to every one of my 810 client newspapers. If they prefer the old ones (some I've seen go back to 1955) I can't do anything about it. I work for THEM, they don't work for me.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

100 YEARS YOUNG AND GROWING

questions and answers

Q. My husband and I are going to retire in a few months. I've been employed most of our married life. Can I get social security benefits on both my husband's work record and on my own?

may, however, also become entitled to a wife's benefit based on your new husband's record. Then you could be paid a monthly amount equal to the higher benefit.

A. If you're eligible for benefits on two work records, you can be paid a monthly amount equal to the higher of the two benefits, but not both. When you apply for benefits, the people in the social security office will tell you which benefit amount is higher.

Q. My husband and I were divorced last year. He's going to retire in a few months. Since I've never worked before, can I get any social security payments on his record?

Q. I was recently divorced and have decided to start using my maiden name again. Should I notify social security of this change?

A. You should, especially if you're employed. Whenever you change the name you use in your employment — whether because of divorce, marriage, or other reasons — you should have it changed on your social security record. You can get a copy of the form "Request for Change in Social Security Records" at any social security office.

A. A wife may get benefits on her divorced husband's work record if he is entitled to benefits and if they were married for more than 20 years. She can get benefits as a divorced wife at 62 or later, as early as 60 if her ex-husband dies after having worked long enough under social security.

Q. My social security record is in my maiden name, and I was recently married. I've always heard that a woman should change her name with social security when she gets married, but I plan to continue using my maiden name for business and legal purposes. Which name should I use for social security?

Q. I am 64 and have been getting monthly social security benefits since my husband died 3 years ago. I plan to remarry. Will my widow's benefits end?

A. It depends on which name you use in your employment. If you plan to consistently use your maiden name for your employment, you don't have to change your name for social security purposes. Just be sure that your employers report your earnings to social security under your maiden name, not your married name.

A. Generally, widows who remarry after age 60 can continue to get benefits on their deceased husband's work record, but in a reduced amount. You

Q. I get social security retirement payments, and I've heard that the amount I can earn this year without losing any of my benefits has increased. If this is true, what is the new amount?

A. You can earn as much as $2,500 in 1975 without having any reduction in your social security payments. For every $2 you earn over $2,520, $1 in benefits will be withheld. But no matter how much you earn for the year, you can get your full social security check for any month in which you neither earn over $210 nor do substantial gainful work in your own business.

It has been a Looooooooooooooooong winter, and April "fooled us all the way!! For thirty days we never knew what she really had in mind! But May . . . ? Longfellow called the word "May," a perfumed word . . . an illuminated initial that means youth, love and song!!! And we're ready to sing it, in so many happy ways that the monty is going to resemble the "Hit Parade!"

Number ONE on the Wyckoff Hit Parade right now is the unbelievable . . . wonderful . . . bright, marvelous . . . The Green Thumb

There's nothing like fresh garden herbs

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
GROW SOME HERBS: It's difficult to say which are the 10 best herbs for the home gardener, but if we had to make a choice it would include: Basil, Chives, Dill, Lavender, oregano, rosemary, sage, summer savory, Sweet Marjoram and thyme.

When it comes to oregano, we know of no other plant whose name is so confusing. There are at least 10 different herbs to which the name has been applied.

The species most commonly and widely known by this name is Origanum vulgare, which has a number of varieties. The "Greek oregano" and "Italian oregano" are two.

You can start your herb seeds indoors and move the seedlings out as soon as weather allows. Herbs are great in containers, and one of the best we've used is the com-

Place it on the ground, holes facing up, and fill with soil mixture of one part each of sand, peat and loam. Keep plants watered in dry weather and you'll have all the herbs you want.

Nothing beats the blocks for growing chives, parsley, summer savory, onions and other herbs.

NORFOLK ISLAND PINE: Many home owners regard this as one of the finest of all foliage plants to grow indoors. They like it because it's durable, slow-growing, and takes little care.

Nearly 100 years ago Norfolk Island Pine was described as the most prized pot evergreen in cultivation, and it still holds top honors.

Plants from a greenhouse should not be fed in your home for at least six months. After that, give them a weak feeding of a liquid plant food such as 23-19-17 every three or four months. They like a cool window, but will tolerate temperatures ranging from 45 to 85 degrees or more.

They will also grow in dim light as well as in full sun. Keep the soil moist at all times, never soggy. A dry air or dry soil will cause the leaves to burn at the edges.

In 1793, Captain William Bligh, the harsh disciplinarian in Mutiny on the Bounty, was in the business of transporting trees from Tahiti to the West Indies. He successfully carried "nearly 1000 breadfruit and other useful plants," thereby earning the nickname of "Breadfruit Blight."

Tax reform and Agent Orange

By GAIL NEVINS

It has been said that tax reform and environmental improvement go hand-in-hand. A new publication based on this concept, called "People & Taxes", is currently being printed. It lays out the problems and offers solutions on the thorny subject.

A year's subscription to "People & Taxes" is $4.00. Write to: P.O. Box 14198, Ben Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044.

This week the Environmental Protection Agency held a hearing in San Francisco regarding Agent Orange, the defoliation agent used by the United States during the Vietnamese War.

Purpose of the hearing was to seek information on the Air Force's plan to incinerate 2.3 million gallons in the middle of the Pacific Ocean.

The Air Force has also been exploring ways to market the chemical as a weedkiller.

According to Environment Action Bulletin, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has applied for a patent on a process that uses coconut charcoal to remove dioxin from 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T; Agent Orange is comprised of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T contaminated with deadly dioxin.

While the fate of those 2.3 million gallons of the defoliation contaminant is still uncertain, the EPA has recently denied a request from the state of Louisiana to use 2.25 million pounds of DDT on cotton this spring.

Weather and economic factors, states the EPA, have a greater impact on reduced cotton yields than insect damage.

Pollens aren't the only thing in the air this season; symposia plans also seem to be bursting out all over.

Obscene calls

By Jean Adams

CALLERS: (Q.) I am 15 and attractive, and I am saving myself for the man I marry. I don't think some boys realize this, because I get obscene phone calls.

They call me up and don't tell me who they are and ask me to have sex with them. Today one offered me money. I said no and hung up on him.

I'm sick of it. Please tell me how to avoid this awful situation.

Let them. They are not worth your unhappiness. Look around you for girls and boys worthy of your friendship.

Write to Jean Adams, The Pocono Record, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received, Jean Adams cannot send personal answers.

Disgusted in Florida

(A.) Your problem is that you listen to the boys long enough for them to tell you what they want. The longer you listen, the more encouraged they are to call again.

Don't listen! Hang up the instant one starts talking. Give him no encouragement at all and he will stop bothering you.

SNUBBED: (Q.) Last summer I had two very good girl friends. We always had fun together. Then we entered high school. Now they don't even say "Hello" to me. They ignore me totally.

This is really hurting me inside. Please tell me how to get them back.

Lonesome in Louisiana

(A.) Starting high school is a big experience. Some girls try to make a big deal out of it. Your former friends apparently are climbers and they obviously think they can climb faster without you.

American dream losing believers, survey shows

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new survey indicated Tuesday that a majority of Americans still believe in the work ethic but many families may be losing faith in the American dream.

Particularly among distressed families, the report on the American Family and Money showed the ideal of working to own your own home, to send the kids to college and to provide a nest egg for retirement had been displaced by the idea that the government should see to it that everyone has a good job and a decent standard of living.

Fifty per cent in the survey, in fact, agreed with a statement expressing such an expectation which the report called—"the psychology of entitlement."

The survey was conducted by Yankelovich, Skelly and White Inc. and involved a scientific cross-section of families. Commissioned by General Mills Inc., the study took place during the midwinter of 1974-75-

-the last interviews being in January.

What emerged as heartening news was "...a picture of the great strengths and adaptive capabilities of the American family."

In meeting the current economic strain and facing an uncertain future the family is "showing flexibility, sturdiness and vitality."

Interestingly, "The Protestant Ethic" and "working wives" are twin forces keeping many families afloat financially despite the faltering economy.

"The Protestant Ethic continues to dominate the value structure of the American family," the report noted.

"Fifty-six per cent of all Americans are strongly committed to such traditional beliefs as 'duty before pleasure,' 'hard work pays off,' religion and 'saving even if it means sacrificing.'"

On working wives, the report said:

"Many families are meeting hard times...by having the wife go to work. Wives are working—either full time (26 per cent) or part time (15 per cent)—in four out of 10 families surveyed.

The study suggests families need help in setting up and sticking to budgets; use of credit, how to repair products and how to stretch the life of clothing, furniture, household goods and automobiles. They also need help finding fun things for the family, things not costing money.

Major changes which families say they are making in ways they do things include cutting down on electricity; staying home more; not eating in restaurants; restricting purchases of clothing and gifts; repairing things that once would have been thrown out.

May marketing alert

Fruits, vegetables best buy

By LORA SHARPE
Family Fare Editor

STROUDSBURG — Fruits and vegetables, including protein-rich dry beans and peas, should be the best buys for May food shoppers.

In the meat case, beef should remain an economic boon with large supplies available and sale prices advertised.

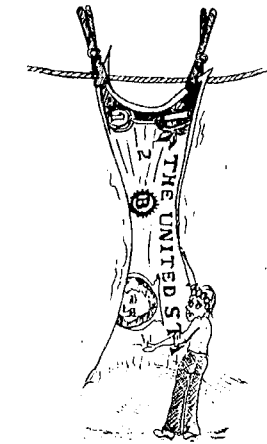

Local markets are also marketing hams and poultry, especially turkey, at sale prices. The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), however, reports only adequate supplies of poultry and light supplies of pork on the market.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are coming to market now. Fresh strawberries, for instance, are selling at area markets for from 38 to 49 cents a pint.

Meanwhile, markets are advertising a number of specials on canned and frozen fruits and vegetables.

Canned corn is a popular sale item in area stores with prices at three 16 or 17 ounce cans for $1. Ears of fresh corn, are selling for approximately 10 cents an ear.

Frozen green beans are advertised at three nine-ounce boxes for $1. fresh beans, at 39 cents a pound; canned beans, at 25 cents for a 15.5 ounce can.

A number of salad components are stocking the produce sections at discounts. Radishes, cucumbers (down to 15 cents each locally) and tomatoes are all on sale. Iceberg lettuce is back down to 33 cents a head.

Oranges and orange juice are again sale items in May. Grapefruit juice is a newcomer to the sale list

The leisure craftsman

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

The Indians of Guatemala are known for their extraordinary hand-loomed and embroidered regional costumes. Embroidery techniques vary with individual cities.

Most embroidery is applied to clothing, but one type is not worn. This needle art is worked by mothers-to-be. A little bit of the embroidery is worked each of the nine months, including one dome-shaped window per month, to border the top or bottom of the design. The last dome window is worked after the new member of the family has arrived.

5. Place a sheet of carbon paper on the fabric, right sides facing.
6. Place the designed tissue on the carbon, design side facing up.
7. Pin all layers together along the outer edges.
8. Use a straight pin to punch through the fabric along the lines of the design. The design will transfer to the fabric in small carbon pin points.
9. The embroidery is simple. Fill in the areas of the design with straight stitches going from edge to edge. Stitches in larger areas may be cut in half with imaginary center lines. Lines in a given area should all run in the same direction. Stitching in curved areas, like the top domes, follows the curve.
10. Work in the same gauge yarn and fill in the total area. The birds are green, the center standing star and side cats are yellow, the glow around the star is lavender, center and side bottom lambs are white, the inner lambs are plum, and the center, bottom birds are blue.

"some evidence that these agents may actually be protective" against benign breast disease, a common affliction. Nor is there any evidence of earlier onset or increased incidence of endometrial cancer associated with pill use. Nor cervical cancer evidence is "conflicting," with resolution dependent upon "additional long-range data."

—Risk of thromboembolism and strokes: The increased risk of death from thromboembolism associated with the pill, established in early studies as approximately three per 100,000 women per year, is confirmed by more recent research, but may now be "even lower because of the lower-dosage pills now in use." Increased risk of venous thrombosis of the legs and cerebral thrombosis, have also been established.

Auxiliary hears M.D.

ALLENTOWN — Officers and committee chairmen from the Monroe County Medical Auxiliary attended a Day of Learning sponsored by the state auxiliary April 17 in Allentown.

The auxiliary members noted that the overriding problem discussed was the current "Malpractice Crisis" in Pennsylvania. The officers from all the eastern counties of the state heard an address by A. Reynolds Crane, M.D., about this problem.

Dr. Crane stated that rates for malpractice insurance have skyrocketed in some file 1,500 per cent since 1960. This fact and the fact that the present insurance carrier for the Pennsylvania Medical Society wished to terminate its contract covering the state's physicians is forcing older doctors to retire early and discouraging young doctors from locating in the state.

Beef grade changes delayed

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The revised U.S. grade standards for beef will not be implemented pending resolution of a lawsuit brought against the United States Department of Agriculture by the Omaha Independent Meatpackers Assn. in U. S. District Court, Omaha, Neb.

The USDA announced the postponement of standard changes following a decision by the Eighth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals upholding a preliminary injunction issued by the District Court.

The court had enjoined implementation of the revised beef grade standards. The revised standards were scheduled to go into effect April 14.

In denying the USDA's request to overturn the preliminary injunction, the Court of Appeals ordered the District Court to hold a hearing on the merits of the case and render a decision within 45 days.

Proposed standards aimed to: make it possible for slightly leaner beef to qualify for prime and choice grades; establish a more restrictive good grade; increase uniformity in eating characteristics; and require that all beef graded be identified for both quality and yield.

The USDA received more than 4,500 comments in response to the grade change proposal.

Kissinger wins confidence vote

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J. — Although Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is the target of increasing criticism in Washington circles, he wins a vote of confidence from a majority of the American people.

Nationwide, 56 per cent of persons interviewed in a recent Gallup Poll say they approve of the way Kissinger is handling his job as Secretary of State, 25 per cent disapprove and 19 per cent are undecided.

Kissinger has been under heavy attack from certain quarters in recent weeks following two major U.S. foreign policy setbacks — the breakdown of his mediation efforts in the Middle East in March and the collapse of Cambodia and impending downfall of South Vietnam. Only about one American in 10, however, places the blame for the breakdown of Mideast talks directly on the U.S. government and Kissinger.

Approval outweighs disapproval among all major population groups and in all four major regions of the nation. Although both Republicans and Democrats lean toward approval, strong bipartisan lines are developing.

Republicans today are far more inclined to approve of Kissinger's performance than are Democrats, with 70 per cent of Republicans approving, compared to 50 per cent of Democrats.

Following is the survey question:
"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Henry Kissinger is handling his job as Secretary of State?"

Following are the detailed breakdowns. As seen, Kissinger has particular appeal with the college-trained segment of the population.

Kissinger placed fourth on the Gallup Poll's "Most Admired Man" list in 1972. He headed the list in 1973 and 1974.

Kissinger's high name recognition and popularity derived from his success in laying the groundwork for former President Nixon's historic visits to China and Russia, for his role in the negotiations that led to the ceasefire in Vietnam, and until just recently, for his successful "shuttle diplomacy" in bringing about an easing of tensions in the Middle East.

I.Q. tests often abused

By MRS. JUDITH GELBER

The trouble with I.Q. (Intelligence Quotient) scores is that they are being used to prove or disprove educational theories — including the one that says I.Q. scores are meaningless and worthless — rather than as a tool to help us educate our children.

Faced with evidence (including I.Q. scores) that many children, particularly children of the poor, aren't making academic headway, people inside and outside of professional education have been asking why this is so.

One widely-accepted explanation is that public education has been overwhelmingly structured to serve the needs of the white middle class. As a result, the great influx of poor, especially minority, children has given our educational system a case of the blind staggers as the schools have had to cope with changing traditional ways.

In all the turmoil of charge and countercharge, it isn't surprising that I.Q. testing has come under heavy fire from all sides. Those who resent the intrusion of blacks and other minority groups have consistently flaunted low I.Q. scores among minority children as "proof" that these children were born intellectually inferior. Why, then, they argue, should we waste taxpayers' money on remedial and other special programs to educate children who probably can't be educated beyond a certain minimum level?

Others counter that I.Q. tests don't accurately measure "intelligence" in all children because the test questions are understood primarily by children of the white middle class, for whom the tests were originally designed.

It is therefore grossly unjust, they claim, to place and advance children in school on the basis of false and misleading test scores. Such practices effectively exclude poor minority children, not only from the educational process but also from the opportunities of American life.

The entire problem is muddled by the fact that there is little agreement on exactly what is measured by an I.Q.

test, or what the score tells us about an individual. Most people agree that these tests measure a limited range of native ability.

A child who scores low on mathematical ability, for example, may be extremely gifted with his hands, or possess a unique talent for the creative arts. Therefore, perhaps the best that can be said about these tests is that they measure a talent for school work, rather than some kind of inherited ability that limits all our achievement from the moment of conception.

But the foundations for a talent for school work are established long before a child enters school. Common sense tells us that a child from a home in which a formal education is seen as something to be endured rather than as a means to advance in life isn't going to do well in school.

I.Q. tests that depend on pre-school advantages can therefore be used only as diagnostic tools, not as fixed indicators of the child's future achievement.

I.Q. scores have and will continue to be abused. But it is up to educators to keep the entire range of school testing procedures out of the political arena.

S-burg may alter codes to moderate enforcement

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Borough Council may have to change their building code after all.

Codes Officer Stanley Melvin told the codes review committee, "I'll do whatever you fellows want, but it must be legal."

At their first meeting, held last week, the committee resolved to change code enforcement procedures rather than attempting to change the BOCA code because of their lack of expertise.

Solicitor J. Joseph McCluskey drew up a tentative memorandum delineating changes the committee had proposed. Melvin objected to some of them claiming they contradicted the code itself.

For example, the memorandum stated residents will be given 90 days in which to complete the necessary repair work.

Melvin explained the code says work must start within 15 days of notification and completed by 60 days. If nothing is done at that time he has to issue a citation or else the people have to file forms for an extension or for an appeal.

Two 60-day extensions are allowed under the code and then "that's it," according to Melvin.

If there is a legal reason why the person can not comply the case goes to the appeals board.

"If you're fair with me, you'll find anybody I had dealings with will tell you I have more than bent over backwards," Melvin said.

Melvin contended the borough must amend the code if it wants to extend the 60-day limit to 90 days.

"There's a reason for everything in there," he said, "You've adopted the fairest, most equitable code in the country."

The committee also suggested Melvin deliver letters personally.

This would avoid the problem of upsetting elderly people with certified letters and would add the personal communication the council desires.

As stated in the memorandum, "It is the intent of the borough that the codes be enforced as on the books and the codes office is instructed to enforce said codes with as little harassment to the residents as possible, and generally to communicate and cooperate with said residents to generally promote the public safety and public welfare and public health within the borough."

Mental health ward reports on services

EAST STROUDSBURG — Most of the persons in the mental health unit of the General Hospital of Monroe County get there through emergency services, the hospital directors were told recently.

Dr. Peter Digiondomico, director of the mental health unit, said the program provides three basic services: emergency, partial hospitalization and inpatient psychiatric care.

Entry into the program is generally through emergency services on the telephone hot line or as walk-in patients.

The hot line is staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week with trained caseworkers backed up by four on call psychiatrists.

The hot line is used heavily, Digiondomico said. Of the 116 emergency contacts in January, 94 were over the telephone. Most calls are for immediate counseling and treatment, preventative help and information or referral.

Of the 94 calls, 24 involved acute mental disorders, some of which included suicidal tendencies, the directors were told. Nineteen callers suffered from severe depression, 13 others were potentially suicidal, 14 were seeking general information and another 14 seeking information on the hospital's psychiatric policies and procedures.

A maximum security room has been established in the emergency department and has been needed about once a month since January.

P.M. team wins digit derby

EAST STROUDSBURG — A three-student team of mathematics problem solvers from Pocono Mountain High School has defeated five other high school teams to win the Second Annual Math Contest at East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC).

Sponsored by the Euclidean Mathematics Club at ESSC, the contest pitted against each other high school teams from Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg, Pocono Mountain, Pleasant Valley, Notre Dame and Pen Argyl.

In preliminary competition Wednesday, Stroudsburg defeated East Stroudsburg, Pocono Mountain beat Pleasant Valley and Notre Dame won over Pen Argyl.

After an hour of problem solving, the two winners of semi-final competition — Pocono Mountain and Stroudsburg — advanced to championship competition.

During the final round, which was televised on closed circuit television through the college campus, the team of Stroudsburg solvers failed to come back from a five-point deficit when it answered the final 20-point question incorrectly.

Persons interested in obtaining a video tape replay of the contest or other information about the contest may obtain the information by writing Theodore Newton, associate professor of mathematics, at the college.

NO DELIVERY — Dozens of people waited in line Wednesday to pick up their laundry from Keiper's Inc., S. Ninth Street which has been closed by the Internal Revenue Service for nonpayment of taxes. Even if the taxes are paid today as expected, the laundry will remain closed and be sold. (Staff photo by Steve Drachler)

Established area laundry gets taken to the cleaners

STROUDSBURG — Keiper's Inc., a S. Ninth Street laundry for over 50 years, has been closed by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) for nonpayment of $8,560 in taxes.

Allen W. Keiper, laundry owner, said Wednesday he will pay the owed taxes today but that the laundry will remain closed. He said he will sell the facility privately.

Keiper said the slumping economy was just one of a multitude of reasons for closing the laundry which had operated from its S. Ninth Street location since 1922.

According to papers filed by the IRS in the Monroe County Courthouse, the taxes are due for the period ending Dec. 31, 1974.

Keiper said the IRS "closed me down without any forewarning." He said an IRS representative gave him a few days to come up with the back taxes before taking action against him.

"He didn't say he would close it down but about noon last Thursday he padlocked the place," Keiper said. Some laundry was partially completed and some was still wet when the padlock went on, he added.

Keiper said customers have been picking up their laundry sporadically since the closing. He said the company will finish cleaning what laundry it has and then let the customers know, by placing a notice on the door, when they can pick it up.

If the taxes remained unpaid, the IRS would sell the property and use the proceeds to cover the taxes.

Police blotter

Bank losses

MILFORD — The two masked bandits who robbed the Wallenpaupack branch of the First National Bank of Pike County Tuesday got away with $11,437, state police at Milford said Wednesday.

A police spokesman said police are checking out several leads and are still maintaining heavy patrols in the Tafton, Lake Wallenpaupack area.

Two injured

MT. BETHEL — A West Pittston man and passenger suffered minor injuries early Wednesday morning when the car they were riding in damaged 130 feet of guard rail, struck a utility pole and then flipped down an embankment off of Rte. 611 in Upper Mt. Bethel Township.

State police at Easton said John Edward Pope, 24, and Annette Fironen, 18, address unknown, were taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County in East Stroudsburg where they were treated and released shortly after 1 a.m.

Shoplifting charge

EAST STROUDSBURG — A Canadensis woman, charged with shoplifting $7.69 worth of goods from the Stroudsburg A&P market, will have a preliminary hearing Friday before District Magistrate Eleanor Randolph.

Borough police arrested Jean Elizabeth Iacona Monday after she allegedly shoplifted food, shampoo and baby powder.

Officials investigate fire in lumber yard

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg Fire Chief William LaBarre has labeled as "suspicious" a late Monday night fire which damaged $10,000 worth of lumber at Cramer's Cashway.

Councils ratify crime bureau

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Township supervisors and Stroudsburg borough councilmen Wednesday ratified a joint agreement for establishing a Bureau of Criminal Investigation to serve the two municipalities and the borough of East Stroudsburg.

The agreement, which was approved Monday by East Stroudsburg councilmen, is needed for the new program, which is funded with a $79,000 Governor's Justice Commission grant.

LaBarre said he has notified the state police fire marshal and he is still investigating to determine the cause of the blaze.

The fire occurred in an outdoor storage area near a building where the lumber company keeps finished lumber and about 15-20 feet from the Sommers Ribbon Co.

Firemen blocked off a portion of North Courtland Street for over 90 minutes, rerouting traffic around the area. LaBarre estimated 7-10 bales of lumber were extensively damaged.

In a fire Tuesday afternoon, Marshalls Creek firemen were called to Leisure Lakes to douse a field and woods fire. Fire Chief Richard McDonough estimated two to three acres of field and woods burned. Firemen needed an hour to douse the blaze.

2 charged in fatal accident

TANNERSVILLE — State police have filed charges against two of three drivers involved in a fatal auto-motorcycle accident near Saylorsburg Saturday.

Tp. Jeffery Hontz of state police at Swiftwater, said charges were filed Wednesday against Russell Johnson, 27, of Star Rte., Sciota and John Lesoine Jr., 29, of Bartonsville.

Johnson, driver of the car which Lesoine's motorcycle struck about a half-mile north of Saylorsburg, is charged with failure to yield right-of-way. He allegedly drove through a stop sign.

John Fish, 47, of Stroudsburg R.D. 2, died enroute to Allentown's Sacred Heart Hospital shortly after the grinding crash. He was a passenger on Lesoine's motorcycle.

Lesoine, listed in fair condition Wednesday in the intensive care unit of the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg, will be charged with equipment violations and for driving a motorcycle which had not been inspected since April, 1974.

Both men will receive their summons, filed before District Magistrate Gerald Canfield of Tannersville, in the mail. He said investigation into other possible charges is still continuing.

The third drive, Walter DePue, 24, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 2, was listed in fair condition in the hospital's intensive care unit Wednesday.

HACKENSACK — You hear stories about high pressure sales tactics and how people are rushed into buying land, but what is it really like?

Ask someone who's been through it — and then filed suit.

Ask J. Alfred Migliore and his wife.

The Migliores were approached by a salesman for a Pike County development in the summer of 1973.

"We don't know how they got our name," Migliore recalled. "They came to our house one day and offered us a free lunch and so on and so forth if we would go and look at some property."

They decided it wasn't a bad idea and went to look at the land one weekend.

Have lunch, buy a lot, pay later

"It was incredible. Everyone was running around with jeeps and radios and things. You could hear them talking on the radios and supposedly making sales," he said.

"The salesman would look around and see another jeep drive up and some people get out. He'd say 'Here comes Eddie with some people who've been looking at the lot, too, so won't you please make up your minds?'" he added.

Although Migliore admitted the high pressure sales pitch made him "very tense and nervous," he and his wife bought an acre of land.

They were very happy with their purchase until he saw the same type of lot somewhere else for a third to half the price he paid.

"When we got home we weren't so pleased," he said.

Then some other things started to go wrong.

"When we went to look at the lot, there were only a few homes being put up. They claimed it was the owners who were putting them up," he said.

"But six months later they were still in the same shape. I felt I was lied to. They were probably model homes the developer put up," Migliore said, his voice rising indignantly.

"They promised us streets, lighting and telephone wires by a certain time but the time came and went and they were still in the same shape as when we bought it," he added.

The Migliores tried to get help from the developer.

"They said 'Of course, we'll see what we can do.' But we knew nothing would happen," he said.

Finally, in April, 1974, the Migliores filed suit against the developer.

"I sued him before he could sue me and I'm sure he would have sued me for the payment," he explained.

"I just wanted out," he added.

The Migliores weren't sure what kind of settlement would be reached or how long they would have to wait.

"His lawyer was very reluctant to even listen," he said.

They the Migliores' luck changed. "A streak of luck," he called it.

It seemed the developer wanted to borrow some money but the bank refused to approve the loan because of the suit against him.

"His lawyer called and agreed to give back all our money, released us from the contract and even paid all our attorney fees," Migliore stated.

The Migliores felt they were lucky to reach a favorable settlement so soon.

But the story doesn't end here.

Harvey Marcus, the Migliore's attorney, also achieved a settlement in a similar case and is presently preparing a third case based on "promises without production."

"They're so brazen — seducing people into buying land," Marcus said. "They call it puffery but we call it fraud."

Six face sentences in Monroe

STROUDSBURG — A Long Pond resident was sentenced to serve 11½-23 months in prison and fined $200 Wednesday in Monroe County Court proceedings.

William Show Jr. pleaded guilty in April to burglarizing the Henryville House on Oct. 15, 1974. Show, who was arrested Jan. 17 by state police at Swiftwater, was given credit for time served since Nov. 17 when he was incarcerated on a separate charge.

In other sentences Wednesday, Clinton Rouch Jr. of Kunkletown was sentenced to 3-23 months in jail. He had pleaded guilty last month to unauthorized use of an automobile from an East Stroudsburg residence on Jan. 17. A psychiatric exam was also ordered.

Steve Busnelli of East Stroudsburg was sentenced to 3-12 months in prison and fined $200. Busnelli was found guilty of retail theft from the Big N Department Store in Stroudsburg. He was given two days credit for time served.

Maryanne Batchler of Brodheadsville was placed on probation for 3-23 months after pleading guilty to receiving stolen property. She was arrested in connection with the Nov. 27, 1974 burglary at a Long Pond residence.

John Krum of Stroudsburg and John Liberto of Sciota were each placed on probation for 3-11 months and fined $500. They had previously pleaded guilty to simple assault in connection with an incident Nov. 24, 1974 at the Bartonsville rest area along Interstate 80.

Area couple's Viet family lost in refugee scramble

By JEFF WIDMER

Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Frank J. Wilder and his Vietnamese wife sit in their East Stroudsburg home watching every television newscast they can, worrying about the fate of their four children who lost their way in the upheaval in South Vietnam.

For a month Wilder has tried to locate the family he left in Vietnam when he returned to America after his tour of duty with the Army. He planned to bring the children to the United States until they became lost in the flood of refugees, but the fall of South Vietnam has Wilder convinced he won't see his children for a long time.

When Wilder left Vietnam in early 1971, he thought he had years to ready his children's exit visas, but the Viet Cong drive to Nha Trang caught him by surprise. His children, who range in age between five and 10, Mrs. Wilder's sister and her parents missed the evacuation plane from Nha Trang.

"If they'd have gotten on that plane they'd have been here by now," he said.

Wilder's hope that his family would reach the American Embassy in Saigon and have their papers processed for emigration crumbled Tuesday when South Vietnam's government surrendered and American Embassy personnel burned their papers and fled.

"Now the only people with contacts with the new government are the French and Swedish embassies," he said. Wilder said he hopes the International Red Cross will locate his family and the embassies will negotiate for the children's emigration.

"It's going to take forever. I think we'll wait until things calm down there. I feel kind of bitter about it (the Communist takeover). It was a long, hard war. The Vietnamese are a hell of a good people and deserve better than what they are going to get."

He said there is a slim chance the children escaped aboard U.S. ships to Guam and the Philippines, but he added he won't know for sure for at least two days.

Zoning variance delayed for Pike nursing home

MILFORD — Milford's borough zoning committee Wednesday recommended that borough council delay issuing a variance for a proposed $1.1 million nursing home until a zoning board meeting can be scheduled.

Representatives from the Milford Convalescent Home requested the zoning committee approve a variance for a two-story, 80 bed unit located in the residential area of Fifth and John Streets.

The new structure would replace the existing 30 unit nursing home on the same property. Sanford Beecher, solicitor for the committee, said the size of the project requires a public hearing before the zoning board prior to any approval by council.

"This is more than an extension on an existing building. This project involved a total new structure and the demolition of an existing one," he said.

Committee members will recommend to borough council that a hearing be held at 7 p.m. Monday, May 19, before the zoning board. Residents in the neighborhood of the project will also be notified by letter of the hearing date.

Harry Rutherford, president of North American Medical Center, Inc., King of Prussia, owners of the Milford nursing home, said the existing building does not meet federal and state safety standards and must be abandoned in the near future.

The second floor of the wooden-frame structure is already closed off to meet fire safety regulations, he said.

"There is no way we could make the building comply with the fire safety codes," Rutherford said.

A regional health planning council has granted a certificate of need for the project and approvals have also been obtained from the state departments of health and welfare.

He said a tertiary sewage treatment plant costing about $65,000 is planned.

Schools to battle venereal disease

EAST STROUDSBURG — Concerned about Americans who contract a new case of venereal disease every 15 seconds, national educators have decided to campaign against the disease this month, and local schools are joining the fight.

Monroe County schools and others across the country have declared the first 10 days in May "Youth Health Defense Days," a time when educators will stress VD is an epidemic, but a curable one if the proper steps are taken.

Mrs. Mary Gunn, who is coordinating the educational campaign for the National Education Association's Department of School Nurses, said VD is a major problem that can lead to insanity, blindness and death if not treated.

Mrs. Gunn, nurse for East Stroudsburg High School, said the program will stress that treatment is free and confidential at the General Hospital of Monroe County Tuesdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Instruction in health and science classes will include a history of VD, what causes it, symptoms, tests for detection, effects of the disease on the body, treatment, prevention and the myths about the disease.

Materials the teachers will use include state published pamphlets for students in grades 7-12 and for their parents, Mrs. Gunn said.

She said minors may be treated for syphilis and gonorrhea without parental consent.

Since the VD clinic at the hospital opened Dec. 5, 1973, 739 people have been seen by clinic staff. Two-thirds of the 739 were male. 75 per cent were in the 15-24 age bracket and 72 cases of VD were detected.

"Locally, this area is no worse than any other area," Mrs. Gunn said about the number of cases of VD.

She also said taking the statistics at face value can be misleading, since people go to other areas to be treated.

Candidates to state platforms

STROUDSBURG — The 11 candidates for Monroe County Commissioner will state their qualifications and views to the public beginning at 8 p.m. tonight in the main ballroom of the Penn Stroud Hilton.

Each candidate will be allowed five minutes to speak. During an intermission, the audience will be given the opportunity to write down questions for particular or all candidates.

There are six Democratic and five Republican candidates seeking four spots.

$341,189 IU budget adopted by directors

STROUDSBURG — Directors from 13 school districts adopted a 1975-76 budget of $341,189 for Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20 (IU) Wednesday night during their annual convention at the Stroudsburg Middle School.

IU provides special education, management and other services to the 13 participating districts in Monroe, Pike and Northampton Counties.

The breakdown of contributions for the five districts in Monroe and Pike Counties is: East Stroudsburg, $9,990, up from $8,225 this year; Pleasant Valley, $5,083, up from $3,167;

Pocono Mountain, $12,300, up from $7,664; Stroudsburg, $11,445, up from $7,132, and Delaware Valley, $7,345, up from $4,576.

Cut backs in federal funds and increases in travel, postal, electrical and other expenses forced next year's increases in the budget, according to IU Executive Director, Dr. Ronald Humber.

New services in the budget include curriculum development and management. Curriculum development is a $1,200 plan to begin a library of curriculum and instruction materials.

Strike continues at hospital

EAST STROUDSBURG — Local 1174 AFL-CIO Wednesday continued to picket against the William H. Lane Construction Company at the building site for a $4.3 million addition to the General Hospital of Monroe County.

The strike was called by the union because they do not have a signed contract with Lane.

A Lane Construction spokesman said Tuesday that an agreement would be reached Wednesday. As of late afternoon Wednesday, the strike continued.

Bullets two up on Celtics; Bulls nip Warriors, 90-89

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Elvin Hayes and Phil Chenier whipsawed the defending champion Boston Celtics with a combined total of 54 points Wednesday night to carry the Washington Bullets to a 117-92 victory and a 2-0 edge in their NBA playoff series.

The Bullets took an 11-point lead in the first quarter of the second game of the best-of-seven series for the Eastern Conference championship and never let the Celtics get back in the contest as Hayes wound up with 29 points and Chenier with 25 before fouling out.

When Chenier encountered foul trouble midway in the third period, Nick Weatherpoon came off the bench to take up the scoring slack and keep the Bullets comfortably in front. The second-year Washington player finished with 18 points, 10 of them in the last quarter.

Don Nelson was high for Boston with 23.

Before a sellout hometown crowd of 19,059, the Bullets took command late in the opening period as Chenier produced 12 points to boost them to a 31-20 lead.

Hayes sank a pair of free throws and got a layup after a steal in the final seconds of the period to key an eight-point Bullets' surge that gave them their big advantage.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tom Boerwinkle's layup with two seconds to play gave the Chicago Bulls a 90-89 victory over the Golden State Warriors Wednesday night, evening their best-of-seven series for the NBA's Western Conference championship at one victory apiece.

The Warriors got two chances in the last two seconds to try and pull the game out. But on one of them, Chet Walker fouled Keith Wilkes to give the Warriors an out of bounds play with one second remaining and Rick Barry's 30-foot shot fell short at the horn.

Chicago won the game at the free throw line, connecting for 28 of 39 free throws while the Warriors hit 15 of 22.

The third game of the series will be on national television Sunday afternoon on the Chicago floor.

Nuggets, 104-99

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Little Mack Calvin sank two free throws with six seconds remaining Wednesday night to ice the game and give the Denver Nuggets a 104-99 American Basketball Association Western Division playoff victory over the Indiana Pacers.

The Nuggets' victory, before an ABA record crowd of 17,421, evened the best-of-seven game series at three games each and sent the action back to Denver Saturday for the finale. The winner will meet the Kentucky Colonels in the league finals.

The lead changed hands 25 times in the game, the last time when Mike Green—who finished as the game-high scorer with 31 points—hit a field goal to put the Nuggets on top, 98-97, with three minutes remaining. Green also hit two free throws to give Denver a 100-97 advantage. Billy Keller later brought Indiana within 102-99, but Calvin's free throws put the game out of reach.

The Pacers led 46-44 at halftime, but the Nuggets outscored Indiana, 36-31 in the third period to take an 80-77 lead into the final 12 minutes.

Bonds' three-run home run gives Yankees 6-4 victory

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bobby Bonds hit reliever Bob Reynolds' second pitch for a three-run homer Wednesday night to cap a four-run ninth inning that carried the New York Yankees to a 6-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Pinch-hitter Walt Williams started the rally with a single off Grant Jackson and then one-out successive singles by Roy White and Elliott Maddox scored the first run of the inning. Reynolds, a righthander, was called in to pitch to Bonds and the Yankee right-fielder lined his second pitch over the 396 foot mark in rightcenter field.

Sparky Lyle, who worked the last 1-2-3 innings in relief of starter Pat Dobson, received credit for his first victory, while Jackson was charged with the loss.

Brewers, 6-2

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Nineteen-year-old Robin Yount collected three hits to raise his average to .393 and George Scott hit a two-run homer Wednesday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-2 win over Detroit, breaking the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

In addition to collecting singles in the third, fifth and eighth innings, Yount scored a run and drove in another. Scott's two-run blast to right field with Yount on base in the eighth accounted for the Brewers' final runs in the eighth.

Indians, 8-1

BOSTON (UPI) — Boog Powell drove in three runs and Gaylord Perry tossed a five-hitter Wednesday night to lift the Cleveland Indians to an 8-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Powell singled home a run in the third and rapped his fourth homer of the season into the centerfield bleachers with George Hendrick aboard in the fifth as Cleveland took a 7-0 lead. Hendrick had three hits and two runs batted in on the evening.

Perry, now 14-1 lifetime against Boston, struck out eight to move into 13th place on the all-time list with 2,337. He now is 4-2 on the year.

Rangers, 8-2

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Jim Spencer drove in four runs with a homer and a double Wednesday night and Jim Bibby survived a blow to his pitching hand to pick up his first win of the season, an 8-2 Texas Rangers conquest of the Chicago White Sox.

With the score tied, 2-2, in the third, Spencer unloaded his second homer of the season to right field with Mike Hargrove aboard.

In the next inning, after Len Randle and Hargrove drew walks off loser Stan Bahnsen, Spencer drove both runners home with a double down the right field line.

Bibby started an inning-ending double-play in the second by stopping a line drive with his bare hand. He shook off the blow and survived for 7 2-3 innings.

Bob Stetler is a Rowdie

By JOE DeVIVO
Record Sports Writer

Bob Stetler could have become a Cosmo. Instead he worked a little harder to become a Rowdie.

Stetler, a standout goalie at Stroudsburg High School and East Stroudsburg State College, has landed a unique position with the expansion Tampa Bay Rowdies of the North American Soccer League.

Although league rules permit teams to maintain a maximum roster of 18 players, the Rowdies are keeping Stetler around as the so-called "19th man."

Stetler's arrangement is unusual, since most teams don't bother with the luxury of a 19th player. The Rowdies feel he has the raw potential and talent to eventually play professional soccer, but lacks experience.

Tampa acquired the rights to Stetler from the New York Cosmos, who drafted him, for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Stetler is eligible to practice with the Rowdies and play in exhibition contests, but he can't suit up for league games.

The Rowdies' number one goalie at the moment is Mike Hewitt from Scotland. Paul Hammond, who the Rowdies acquired on loan from Crystal Palace in Europe, is expected to arrive this week and serve as the back-up goaltender.

Since Hammond is available to the Rowdies only on a one-season loan, there's a good chance Stetler will move up to the regular roster by next year.

Stetler has no complaints about serving as a one-man taxi squad and agrees he sorely needs more experience against top-flight competition.

"I'm getting the experience I need," Stetler said over the telephone from Tampa. "There's a big difference from college ball. The skill level here is unbelievable."

Stetler played in two pre-season games against the San Antonio Thunder and was activated for last weekend's league opener against the Rochester Lancers.

He didn't see any action in the Rowdies' 2-1 overtime victory over Rochester, which attracted about 12,000 fans, but played about half of each of the two exhibition contests against San Antonio and allowed two goals.

The Rowdies won the first exhibition, 2-1, but lost the second match-up by a 3-1 score.

"I felt I did well against San Antonio," Stetler said. "That's kind of what made up the coach's mind to keep me."

Stetler, who missed nearly the entire wrestling season at ESSC last winter due to knee surgery, said the knee still occasionally gives him trouble.

"It bothered me in practice last week and I had to miss a day," Stetler said. "I stretched a ligament. But it's coming around and getting better every day."

One big factor which increases Stetler's chances of sticking with the Rowdies next season is a league rule which requires each team to maintain a certain number of American players on its roster.

As an expansion franchise, the Rowdies need only three Americans. Next season, they'll have to have five. Excluding Stetler, the current Rowdie roster contains four Americans.

Stetler is hoping he can become the fifth.

Sonny Jurgensen's grid career ends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sonny Jurgensen—one of pro football's finest passers—said Wednesday he will formally call it quits today.

The Washington Redskins called a news conference for 10 a.m. EDT, when Coach George Allen was expected to announce the retirement of the 40-year-old star.

But Jurgensen scooped his coach Wednesday by saying his playing days are over, despite overtures from Philadelphia of the World Football League.

"I consider them over. I really do," he told Richmond television station WLEX.

Jurgensen will hold a news conference today, to announce he is becoming a full-time associate of a financial management consultant firm.

The end of Jurgensen's playing career came on a note of acrimony, climaxed earlier this week when Allen told the NFL's leading active passer that the Redskins had no major plans for him in the future.

Allen met Tuesday with the popular quarterback and also with Billy Kilmer, who supplanted him in recent seasons as Allen's No. 1 choice. Kilmer has insisted on being traded.

Jurgensen's $120,000-a-year contract expired Wednesday, making him a free agent. Allen was said to have indicated to the former Duke star he was expendable as a parttime quarterback at that salary range.

Jurgensen told the television station that pride would prevent him from returning to the Redskins, even if they asked him back. He also said his family does not want him to go to Philadelphia to play in the WFL, even if a $1 million contract is offered.

Jurgensen told the station that he will probably accept an offer to become a parttime CBS television football analyst in addition to his work with the consulting firm.

The Redskins also have available at quarterback former Notre Dame star Joe Theismann and ex-New York Giant Randy Johnson who was signed after a year with the World Football League.

The dropping of Jurgensen—one of the most popular players in Redskin history—is expected to draw fire from the fans. Seeing only parttime service last season, the 19-year veteran led the National Football Conference in passing statistics, completing 107 of 167 attempts and throwing for 11 touchdowns.

Free agent day

NEW YORK (UPI) — A group of National Football League die-hards hum a new theme song today: "Hurray, Hurray, it's the first of May and we're a bunch of free agents today."

Joe Namath leads the chant of some two dozen top pro footballers whose option year of their contracts expires today.

Namath, who once signed a celebrated $400,000 contract to quarterback the New York Jets, possibly is headed for the World Football League, where a $4 million package awaits Willie Joe.

Sonny Jurgensen, a 41-year-old quarterback who played 18 years in the NFL, had his option day, but instead is opting to retire.

The "new" WFL collared a raft of names for its 1975 season that includes the heralded Miami Dolphin trio of Larry Csonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Kick for the Memphis Southmen, a duo of running back Calvin Hill from Dallas and wide receiver John Gilliam from Minnesota for the Hawaiians, and such talents as quarterback Daryle Lamonica from Oakland for the Southern California Sun, Cleveland guard Glen Holloway and Pittsburgh defensive end L.C. Greenwood.

Other free agents today are Pete Athas and Spider Lockhart of the New York Giants; Bill Brown of Minnesota; Washington's Duane Thomas, Larry Smith and Jackie Smith; St. Louis' Norm Thompson, Pete Barnes, Dave Butz and Jackie Smith, and Detroit's Ben Davis, John Small and Larry Walton.

Players who exercise their option and sign with another NFL club bring the controversial "Rozelle Rule" into effect. If the teams involved can't agree on adequate compensation, then Commissioner Pete Rozelle has the final decision.

Mounties down Kids, 5-2

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg wrapped up its Lehigh Valley League tennis season Wednesday with a 5-2 victory over Northampton.

The Mounties, who boosted their record to 8-4 overall and 6-2 in the league, dropped the number one singles match when John Coleman was forced to default, but then came back to win the other three singles matches.

Bill Austell and John Newman whipped their opponents in straight sets and John Frailey outlasted Mike Myrski, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5 in a tightly-contested match.

In the doubles competition, Austell and Frailey teamed up to down Frank Zwegolitz and Elek Erodosy. Steve Krawitz and Pete Andrews won the Mounties fifth and final point.

Mounties capture softball title, 7-1

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg snapped a 1-1 tie with a pair of runs in the fourth inning and added two more in both the fifth and sixth innings Wednesday to defeat Whitehall, 7-1, and win the first half softball title in the Lehigh Valley League.

Stroudsburg trailed 1-0 as Whitehall scored an unearned run in the second inning, but Bridget Hippler drove home Teri Griffin with a bases-loaded single in the third to tie it and Diane Zablotsky snapped the 1-1 tie with a run-scoring single in the fourth.

Sue Crooks walked to lead off the fourth, with Sally Scheller forcing her at second. Griffin reached on an error and Vanessa Besecker walked to load the bases. Zablotsky and Frailey then singled in runs.

The count went to 4-1 in the fifth when Crooks walked, Scheller singled and an error on Scheller's hit moved the runners to second and third. Griffin singled home Crooks and Scheller scored on a wild throw to third.

The final two runs came in the sixth when Zablotsky reached on an error, taking second on the play. Hippler singled home Zablotsky, taking second on the play at the plate. Crooks walked before Audrey Metzgar singled in Hippler.

Stroudsburg wins the first half with a 6-0 record, with Wednesday's game the first-half finale. The Mounties are also 1-0 in second half play, the second half having started Monday.

Pincay replaces 'the Shoe'

LOUISVILLE, KY. (UPI) — It may be heresy, but Diabolo's trainer Sid Martin has picked Laffit Pincay over the great Willie Shoemaker as his jockey for Saturday's 101st Kentucky Derby.

Martin apparently found the Shoe's ride aboard Diabolo in the Santa Anita Derby unsatisfactory. After he finished a disappointing third behind Avatar in the race, Martin replaced Shoemaker with Pincay.

The quiet, gentlemanly, trainer refuses to blame Shoemaker for Diabolo's three-length loss to Avatar or to comment on the jockey change. But films of the race show Frank McMahon's colt was hemmed in with no room to move throughout the stretch turn after being handicapped by a faltering start.

Shoemaker, meanwhile, picked up the mount of Avatar and will be going for his fourth victory. He captured his first Derby with Swaps in 1955 and also won with Tomy Lee in 1959 and Lucky Debonair in 1965.

Pincay, three times the nation's leading money-winner, is still looking for his first Derby victory.

Bulldog jayvees rout Mounties

STROUDSBURG — Dennis Mankos cracked a three-run homer and Slatington took advantage of eight Stroudsburg errors as the Bulldogs posted a 11-4 victory over the Mounties in a junior varsity baseball game.

Greg Miller laced a two-run triple and scored twice to lead the Mounties' offensive efforts.

Mounties' Blair smashes record

STROUDSBURG — Tom Blair shattered his own school and field record in the discus Wednesday as Stroudsburg rolled over Northampton, 72½, 45½ in a Lehigh Valley League track and field meet.

Blair, who also finished second in the shot put, uncorked a throw of 164-3 to break the mark of 162-3 which he set earlier this season.

Sophomore distance runner Tom DeSchraver had a hand in three first place finishes for the Mounties. DeSchraver won the mile and two-mile runs and ran the anchor leg on the Mounties' winning two-mile relay team.

Other winners for the Mounties, who are now 6-2 overall and 4-2 in the league, were Bob Tilwick in the 100; Dan Brodhead in the 800; Frank Bell in the shot put; Rod Baechtold in the long jump; and John Keiper in the pole vault.

Mounties win pair

EAST STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg's athletes broke four school records and tied one other mark as the Mounties swept a triangular track and field meet from Palisades and East Stroudsburg.

The Mounties rolled up 70 points to win the event, while Palisades finished second with 58 points, and East Stroudsburg finished third with 21.

Libby Wright led the assault on the Stroudsburg record book by setting a new school record in the shot put and tying a record in the high jump.

Sharon Murray set a new school record with a winning loss of 83-4¼ in the discus.

Slatington blanks Pocono Mt.

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg paraded 15 batters to the plate in an 11-run first inning enroute to a 20-8 rout over Pocono Central Catholic.

The Cavaliers jumped on Kingsmen starter Dennis Dougherty for nine hits and three walks in the opening inning. Randy Seese drove in three runs in the big inning on a bases-loaded walk and a two-run single.

Dave Beck, who went 3-for-4 and scored four runs, and Mike Reinhart both drove in two runs apiece to spark the scoring outburst which propelled the Cavaliers to their seventh victory against four losses.

Randy Litts, who collected three hits and scored four runs, and Rick Myers who scored three times and singled in his only official time at bat, were two other thorns in the Kingsmen's side.

Cavalier starter Daryl Eppley worked the first four innings and struck out six batters and allowed five runs. Ed Mesko finished up and received credit for the victory.

Pete Radocha had opened the inning with his second straight double to leftfield. Kutztown intentionally walked Joe Buletza and after Tom Mallozzi sacrificed, the Bears also gave John Varacallo a walk to tie the bases.

This brought up Schmoyer, a Parkland High School graduate, who crossed up the strategy. Varacallo scored the third run of the inning, taking home with a perfect hook slide on Kyle Hoar's groundout.

Bonda set the side down in order in the ninth inning with the help of a belly-sliding catch by rightfielder Hoar of a long drive down the foul-line.

The junior rightlander from Olyphant scattered eight hits and pitched one-hit ball over the last four innings.

Bonda, a transfer from Keystone Junior College, came within one batter of hurling a complete game earlier in the season. He has a 2-0 record and has allowed only five earned runs in 33 2/3 innings for a 1.33 earned-run average. Kutztown broke on top with a run in the second inning on a walk and singles by Dave Gorman and Bob Bradley.

The Warriors countered with three runs in the bottom of the second. A walk, Mallozzi's single to rightfield and Varacallo's bunt single loaded the bases.

One run scored on a bases-loaded walk to Schmoyer, who fouled off seven pitches. Hoar then grounded to pitcher Ron Portnova who threw to the plate for one out, but catcher Mitch Heffinger, trying for the doubleplay, threw wild to first base to let in two more runs.

The Bears notched a single run in the third inning as Gene Lattig reached on an error and rode home on Joe Novatnak's double. They tied the score in the fifth on a double by John Zielinski and Novatnak's single.

Zielinski had Kutztown's only hit in the late innings with a booming leadoff double which almost reached the leftfield fence. Bonda struck out Novatnak, however, and got two outfield flyouts to end the inning.

Two-run single keys Warriors 6-3 victory

EAST STROUDSBURG — Freshman John Schmoyer collected his third game-winning hit of the season and Robin Bonda pitched the team's first complete game as East Stroudsburg State College trimmed Kutztown, 6-3, in baseball Wednesday.

Schmoyer came up with the score tied, 3-3, and the bases loaded in the eighth inning. He drilled a ground single between first and second base to drive in two runs.

Pete Radocha had opened the inning with his second straight double to leftfield. Kutztown intentionally walked Joe Buletza and after Tom Mallozzi sacrificed, the Bears also gave John Varacallo a walk to tie the bases.

This brought up Schmoyer, a Parkland High School graduate, who crossed up the strategy. Varacallo scored the third run of the inning, taking home with a perfect hook slide on Kyle Hoar's groundout.

SLATINGTON — A two-out error in the second inning gave Slatington a chance to score three runs and Stam Montrom added a solo home run in the third Wednesday as Slatington blanked Pocono Mountain, 4-0, in an independent baseball contest.

Brian Frantz and winning pitcher Dale Lakatosh were on base with two out in the second when Bob Edwards' infield bouncer was bobbled. Frantz scored on the play for a 1-0 Slatington lead.

Mark Griffin singled in Lakatosh and Bob Andrews singled home Edwards with the third run. Montrom's homer in the third completed the scoring.

The Cardinals got only two hits off Lakatosh in losing their eighth game in 12 starts. Joe Batton doubled in the fourth, but died on base and Bob McHale singled in the seventh, also being stranded on base.

Lakatosh fanned four, while loser Dean Hartshorn allowed just one extra-base hit in six innings for the Cardinals. Slatington is now 7-3 overall.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — A good word from the right source may enable you to gain the recognition you have been seeking. Confidential matters highly favored.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — One of those days in which your innate directness will not entirely pay off. If you need a favor, use a subtle and imaginative approach.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Not a good day for trying to push pet schemes; for taking the initiative generally. Concentrate on routine activities.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — A good day for occupational interests. Outlook especially favorable if you will be dealing with superiors.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — A day of surprises! Not only will someone you've helped in the past return the favor, but an added bonus "thrown in" will delight you.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Accent is on family relationships now. In fact, a parent or senior relative could give you some highly welcome encouragement; perhaps even financial help.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Stellar influences auspicious. Tailor moves sagely to fit the occasion. If stresses arise, ease off sufficiently to think and judge more clearly.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — This is no time to venture forth in search of "greener pastures." Stick to the tried and proven or some things could get out of hand.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Your ability to see below the surface a boon now. You can gain by capitalizing on information come upon unexpectedly. Don't hesitate to use it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — A renewed interest in a previously dropped project indicated — with greater probability of success now. Personal relationships and travel highly favored.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Some restraint in order; also some rechecking of plans. Prospects brightening in some areas, but foresight a "must."

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Someone in a position to help will be a willing listener, so outline your goals frankly. But be sure they are realistic.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine intellect, lofty ambitions and the tenacity required to attain them. The fields in which you can succeed are almost endless since your versatility is outstanding. You have definite inclinations toward art, but are also attracted to science (especially in the medical and research fields); could succeed in the law, the diplomacy, music or practically any area of the entertainment world. Do not let tendencies toward willfulness and obstinacy alienate those who have your best interests at heart.

Final contract — Six Clubs.
Opening lead — nine of clubs.

Dear Mr. Becker: Bridge is to me a very relaxing game, especially when I am asleep! You see, Mr. Becker, I am one of those lucky people who often dream about bridge and find themselves performing incredibly heroic feats which they could not possibly accomplish at the bridge table in real life. For example, take this delicious morsel which arises quite often while I am deeply enconced in the Land of Nod. I can't tell you how or why I always get to this abominable contract of six clubs. But the fact is that I do, and besides, West always leads a trump. You'd think he'd occasionally vary his opening lead, but obviously he hasn't learned his lesson yet.

I play the queen from dummy, overtaking it with the king, and draw the missing trumps with the A-J-10. At the same time, I discard the A-K-Q of spades from dummy!

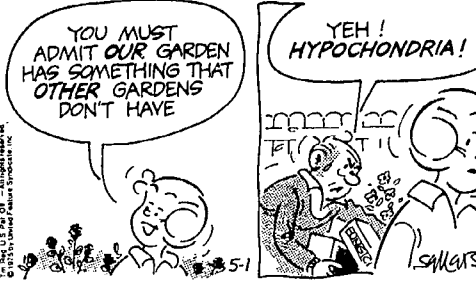

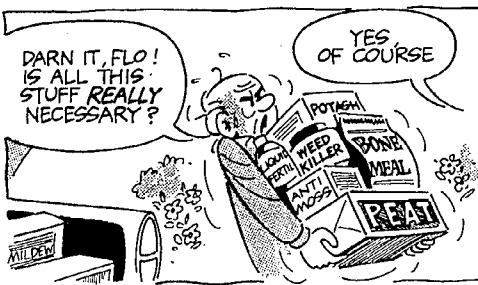

Now I cash the J-10-9 of spades and exit from my hand with the deuce of spades. Having discarded all four hearts from dummy as the four rounds of spades were played, there is now nothing left in dummy but the A-K-J-9-7 of diamonds.

Poor East, after winning the fourth round of spades, finds that all he has in his hand at this stage are the five diamonds he started with, and he is consequently forced to return one of them. When he does, it allows me to score the last five tricks with the A-K-J-9-7 of diamonds, and as a result I wind up making the slam.

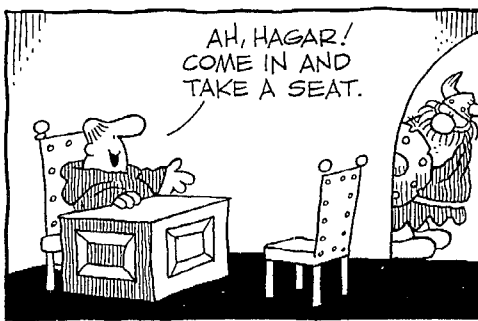

I don't know whether there's anything instructive about this hand for your readers, but it certainly represents an infinite source of pleasure to me. I only wish I could play this way when I'm awake. Pleasant dreams, Mr. Becker. Cordially yours, Ananias Jones.

Checking a child's growth

Our youngest boy is eight. He is not frail, but he is distinctly smaller than our other children were at his age. He is the smallest of all his classmates. I would like to know at what age he should be studied with the possibility of forcing growth through hormones.

Mrs. F.M., Ohio

Dear Mrs. M.:

It is a testimonial to you that you recognize that this problem may exist. Far too many parents do not face this reality and delay seeking advice. They procrastinate in the hope that there will be growth and that the problem will disappear.

The rate of growth varies in children of the same age. It may even vary with children in the same family.

When there is very definite evidence of short stature, investigation of it should not be delayed. Studies of the blood for hormones and hormone balance can sometimes be revealing. Specialists in endocrinology can determine hormone deficiencies and establish a course of therapy to help speed or enhance growth.

It may be that in an 8-year-old child no treatment will be necessary, and that time alone will adjust his height to normal growth patterns.

But it is important to seek early advice to be sure that social embarrassment, a great problem in undersized children can be eliminated early.

How long do most medicines maintain their effectiveness?
Mr. B.N.B., N.D.

Dear Mr. B.:

Almost always there is an expiration date printed on the original bottle sold by pharmaceutical companies.

Pharmacists, from their records and the expiration of their own stock, can tell you the life span of effectiveness of their drugs.

The "shelf life" of drugs varies tremendously. There is no universal rule that applies to all of them. Watery and alcoholic solutions of drugs become concentrated by evaporation over a long period of time. The prescribed dose, therefore, may not be correct.

Generally, small quantities of antibiotics and other drugs used for a specific infection should be discarded.

A special note of warning: Eyedrops used for infections easily become contaminated. These certainly should not be kept "on the shelf" after a course of treatment.

Find revitalized hepatitis battle

By PATRICK YOUNG
Dow Jones-Offaway News
In 1963 Dr. Baruch Blumberg of the Institute of Cancer Research in Philadelphia discovered a substance in the blood of some Australian aborigines that he called the Australian antigen.

The significance of Blumberg's find went unrecognized until 1967, when researchers realized that the Australian antigen was part of the virus that caused hepatitis B, a sometimes-deadly form of the infectious disease.

Doctors had long recognized two types of viral hepatitis, A and B. Hepatitis A, often called infectious hepatitis, was the milder and more common form, apparently spread largely by personal contact and through contaminated food and water. Type B, known as serum hepatitis because it seemed to be transmitted primarily by blood transfusions, accounted for most hepatitis deaths.

Blumberg's work revitalized the study of hepatitis, whose existence was recognized as far back as the time of Hippocrates. The first major result was the development of a blood test that could screen out people with the hepatitis-B virus from among potential blood donors.

Studies at several medical centers indicate that since the American Association of Blood Banks ordered all its members to use the test in late 1971, the incidence of hepatitis after transfusions has decreased by about 25 per cent.

More recent hepatitis finds, many of them possible only because a test for the hepatitis-B virus exists are:

— Some one million Americans are hepatitis-B "carriers," capable of infecting others although they themselves show no symptoms of the disease.

— Several hepatitis-B vaccines have proved promising in animal tests; the first human tests may begin within two years.

— Some mothers who are carriers can transmit the hepatitis-B carrier state to their infants.

— The hepatitis-A virus has been photographed, raising hopes that a vaccine against it may be developed yet.

— New evidence supports an old suspicion that a hepatitis C exists, caused by a virus different from those causing A and B.

Hepatitis, a word derived from Latin, means liver inflammation. It is one of the major infectious diseases found throughout the world.

The United States recorded 59,311 cases and 1,109 deaths last year. But because many cases go unreported and mild cases often aren't diagnosed, estimates of the actual number of U.S. cases in 1974 run as high as 600,000.

Recent studies show a surprising result. Hepatitis-B carriers are far more numerous than thought. In studies of more than 30,000 healthy New York City area residents, Dr. Wolf Szmuness and his colleagues at the New York Blood Center found that 5 people in every 1,000 were carriers. The carrier rate was far higher in blacks (2 of every 100) and in Chinese Americans (10 of every 100).

"Based on these figures, we estimate the total number of asymptomatic carriers in the United States at approximately 900,000 to one million people," says Szmuness. "While the number in the entire world may be from 150 to 200 million. Although carriers are symptomless, Szmuness found signs of some liver damage in one-third of those he tested.

Patients suffering acute hepatitis B, where symptoms are present, can infect others by kissing, through contact and apparently through sexual intercourse. And now researchers say that some carriers also can pass on the disease through personal contact.

Grass-fed beef brings bargains

By PATRICIA FANNING
Dow Jones-Offaway News

It took four butchers to handle the eager customers buying grass-fed beef on a recent Saturday morning at Joe Gifford's Meat Market just north of Seattle. The rush was brought on by selling beef at an average of 35 cents a pound less than the prime, grain-fed sign touted on a supermarket sign less than a block away.

Since Gifford switched to grass-fed beef last October, his sales of beef cuts have soared from a volume the equivalent of 2 to 3 cattle a week to 12 to 13 per week. He says he has gained about 600 new customers.

In Seattle and elsewhere, grass-fed beef has made a big comeback since it disappeared from American dinner tables in the 1940s. It vanished then because cattle producers could get plenty of cheap grain to fatten beef in feed lots instead of on the range.

Now that grain is neither cheap nor plentiful, many producers have started to send their cattle straight from the pasture to the public. Others have shortened the time that cattle spend munching grain instead of grass.

Cattle that have not been fed grain account for 40 to 44 per cent of beef on the market this year; the proportion was 20 per cent in 1974. The usual level for years has been 20 per cent and consisted mostly of old dairy animals or mother cows; most such meat is processed, not sold as fresh cuts.

Beef from cattle without the traditional feed-lot finishing is popularly called grass-fed, though it actually falls into three distinct categories:

— Calf comes from recently weaned animals raised on milk and grass.

— Actual grass-fed beef comes from animals up to two years old that reach full size on grass or other roughage.

— Short-fed beef comes from animals that spend about a year on the range and from 80 to 90 days in the feed lot (grain-fed beef requires from 130 to 180 days on feed).

Grass-fed beef is leaner than grain-fed. There is less marbling, or flecks of fat within the meat, and less solid fat on each cut. What little fat is present is likely to be yellowish.

The lower fat content means less cholesterol, which has been implicated in heart disease. But lack of fat also means that the meat may be somewhat tough and that it can dry out during cooking.

Gifford, for example, tells each customer that grass-fed roasts should be cooked up to an hour or longer than ordinary roasts at a low oven temperature. He recommends placing steaks farther from the broiler element. Some supermarkets suggest that grass-fed steaks should be baked while cooking and never served well-done.

Apparently a lot of people are willing to switch. During the past year Kroger Co., a Cincinnati supermarket chain with stores in 23 states, added a line of grass-fed cuts to its regular stock of choice beef.

Consumer response has been "very enthusiastic," Kroger reports. In some areas grass-fed beef accounts for more than half of Kroger's retail sales. Dubbed triify beef, Kroger's grass-fed line is mechanically tenderized and sells for 35 to 50 cents a pound less than choice grain-fed.

GOODWILL USED CARS

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — Ted Knight, "Ted Baxter" of the Mary Tyler Moore TV merriment, just recorded "I'm in Love With Barbara Walters"; might make Ted a star on his own: Carol Burnett became a solo-TV star after she recorded "I'm in Love With John Foster Dulles" and sang it on the Jack Paarcast ... Steve McQueen's agony isn't caused only by the troubles around his Ali: he's enduring an acupuncture for his hearing problem ... Sinatra's Berlin concert ducats are peddling at $63; scalpers are getting more ... One of the off-screen H'wood slaves working on Liz Taylor's Russia-filming "Bluebird" quietly was bounced through the Iron Curtain back to H'wood for alleged CIA nosiness.

George Burns's recent unplanned huge comeback ("Sunshine Boys" film with Walter Matthau, etc.) won the 79-year-old hambone a week's performance solo at London's Cunard II Hotel ... George told us in "21" he had an aching back and Goodman Ace insisted on taking George to his doctor: turned out to be a nose-specialist who stuck telephone-pole-medication up George's schnozz. "And somehow my back stopped aching." He went back for several more treatments wherein he had to wait with a flock of patients — until the ham started cooking and he did his act in the waiting room for his smallest audience since Jack Benny's solo's appreciations ... Here's how George refuses to bother vegetating: soon as he reserved his plane tickets back to Fawn City from Fun City, he called his gang to reserve a bridge game at the Hillcrest Country Club where the quips fall more often than golf balls.

The great Sy Oliver band at the Rainbow Room, most beautiful nightclub in the world, has been renewed for a long run, one-worded "indefinitely"; great! ... Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee, a proclaimed old friend of President J.F. Kennedy, extends his strange brand of friendship by snitching on his old pal in, of all no doubt dignified mags, Playboy: where he squeals that he and JFK attended a porno-film the night of the W. Virginia primary; cad!

The Stage Deli is getting brand new interior decor but won't change the interior-foder that keeps us all fat: Red Skelton, in for an infusion of pastrami, told boss Jimmy Richter he ought to hire a few typical funny waiters for opening night from among the regular clientele — "Me. Bob Hope. Milton Berle. George Burns" ... Red will be a guest at the White House May 8 — but won't perform: how they gonna keep Red off the stage, no matter what the invitation reads?

Freaky-screamer Monti Rock III or whatever number he's screaming these odd showbiz days has had two big disc hits in a row and will infuse at least $200,000 by June ... Monti did the Star Bit — rocked into the new chic Coreander with five cronies in tow and hoisted the grunt for them all ... Godfrey Cambridge threatens to turn his recent much-publicized accusations of unfriendly Connecticut neighbors into a movie, possibly titled "Mr. Blacky Builds His Dream House"; he'd produce and star ... EX-American League baseball great Ken Aspromonte joined ex-fight champ Joe Louis as a greeter at Vegas' Caesars Palace.

The Friars Club "Salute to Sir Lew." Sir Lew being England's all-showbiz tycoon Sir Lew Grade, was a salute to a right knight: Lew's success as boss of British TV was accomplished without bludgeoning methods, with practical charm, fantastic showbiz insight and respect for the rights of performers Lew started in less noble circumstances — as the champion Charleston Dancer of Great Britain. An earned honor for the right knight.

The years-old plan to turn the White Light N.Y. area into the Broadway Mall is close to fruition: several years ago Rome's plan to make the Via Condotti a mall fell on certainly dead ears — so the malls were inflicted on several parallel vias: which now are so fantastically encouraging to prosperous Roman shopping that the Via Condotti wants to do likewise; we've seen the fabulous shopping traffic flooding the streets-turned-malls, and it works.
